Biographical History

Diane Ciral was born on November 27, 1934. Raised in Hyde Park, she has been a devoted Chicagoan her entire life. Educated at the University of Wisconsin where she majored in theatre, Ciral then returned to Chicago to marry her husband Shevlin and raise their children Jody and Dan. It was as a young mother in the 1960s that Ciral first became involved in many liberal causes and began her active organizational life. Ciral was appointed to the Uptown Conservation Community Council in 1975 and also worked with the Uptown branch of the Hull House. In 1975, Ciral was among the founding members of Friends of the Parks, a citizens' action group concerned about preserving the parks in Chicago, which she would continue to be involved with for more than 30 years. Ciral worked extensively with the Chicago Sister Cities International Program on the Casablanca Committee and travelled to Morocco through this organization numerous times. Additionally, she worked with the Newberry Library and chaired its Bughouse Square Committee for a number of years. Among her other causes, Ciral has also been an active member of International Women Associates, an organization devoted to improving international relations through professional and personal communication and exchanges, since 2002.

Scope and Content

The Diane Ciral Papers consist of 4.0 linear feet (8 boxes) of materials spanning the years 1967-2012, as well as copies of a document from 1898. The organizational material relates mainly to three of the many organizations Ciral was actively involved in: Friends of the Parks, International Women Associates, and Sister Cities International Casablanca Committee, with additional materials related to other organizations. The collection also includes many photographs, oversized material such as newspapers from the Fort Indianatown Gap refugee camp for Southeast Asian refugees in the 1970s, and 3D objects including political buttons from Dick Friedman's 1971 mayoral campaign. All series are arranged alphabetically and subsequently by date where applicable.
