Administrative History

In 1898 Ina Law Robertson opened the Eleanor Hotel, a residence to provide low-cost and safe housing for Chicago's working women. After the first Eleanor Hotel (later known as Eleanor Club) was created, a second Club was established in 1905, and multiple other Clubs were started in Chicago in the following years. Robertson's idea to provide affordable housing to support women, often transitioning from rural homes to urban living, was the beginning of what was later known as the Eleanor Foundation. The Eleanor Residence for Working Women and Students was the last housing location, which closed in 2001.

Scope and Content

The Eleanor Foundation records roughly span the years 1894 to 2001. These materials include photographs, publications, correspondence, and more. This collection is unprocessed. Descriptions and dates are only estimations.
