BEAZLEY INSTITUTE FOR HEALTH LAW AND POLICY

welcomes

Dr. Fazal Khan

VISITING PROFESSOR

Dr. Fazal Khan, a legal and medical scholar in the areas of health care reform, the effects of globalization on health care, and the regulation of emerging biotechnology, will join Loyola University Chicago's nationally recognized Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy as a visiting professor this fall. Dr. Khan joins Loyola from the University of Georgia School of Law, where he specializes in health law. Khan earned his MD and JD degrees from the Medical Scholars Program at the University of Illinois Urbana–Champaign. His scholarly articles have been published in the Harvard Law Review and Health Matrix. At Loyola, he will teach courses in Law & Science and International Products Liability.
