

WEEKLY OUTLINE

Globalization and Educational Policy

This course is based on the assumptions that it is no longer possible to interpret and analyze educational policies within their national contexts; and that the processes of globalization not only encourage governments into pursuing particular policies but also shape the ways policies are now developed and monitored. We will review some of the key debates surrounding the notion of globalization; explore how educational ideas circulate around the world; and examine how global institutions, such as transnational corporations, intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and the media now promote a particular 'neo-liberal' view of education as a way of responding to what they view as the demands of the global economy and a globally inter-connected world. Drawing upon a range of case studies, taken from around the world, we will discuss some of the consequences of this view of education on individuals, schools and communities; and consider how its negative effects are being resisted around the world.
