

You are invited to join us for a

TOUR OF TOXIC CHICAGO

What is the price of past and present industrial pollution on the communities that have produced the gasoline, steel, and manufactured goods that we rely upon every day?

The Loyola University Chicago
Center for Urban Research and Learning, in cooperation with the Center for Urban Environmental Research and Policy,
the Heartland Center, and the Calumet Project, invite you to join us for a bus tour and conversation with activists in Northwest Indiana.

- Learn about the long-term impact of industrial pollution on local communities
- Learn about the Calumet Project's "Bucket Brigade" to monitor air pollution outside local schools.
- Learn what efforts are being made to restore toxic waste sites and create conservation areas.
- Learn what faculty and students can do to work with other residents of the region to build an environmentally just life for all.

Saturday, November 7

Bus leaves Lake Shore Campus at 9:30 am and returns at 4:00 pm.
Lunch will be available.

The tour is open to Loyola University students, faculty, staff, and community partners. Space is limited. Please e-mail glopez@luc.edu or call 312-915-7769 to reserve a seat.
