

Preparing people to lead extraordinary lives

Center for Experiential Learning Sullivan Center

The Center for Experiential Learning provides students, faculty, staff and community partner organizations with resources for academic experiential learning opportunities. Such opportunities provide students with an enriching academic experience, by deeply engaging them in direct service in the community, by connecting them with faculty in mentoring relationships to engage in research projects, and by exploring field-based work through academic internships. These academic experiences extend student learning outside the walls of the classroom and shape the academic, civic, personal, social, ethical, and career development of students.

How can we serve as a resource for STUDENTS?

The Center for Experiential Learning serves as a resource for:

1. Academic Internship Opportunities

- Meet with a staff member one-one-one to discuss ways to enhance educational experience through experiential learning
- Connect with quality internship opportunities for credit
- Collaborate with department internship coordinators
- Promote and publicize service-learning and internship courses to students

2. Service-Learning Courses

- Identify service-learning courses to register for next semester
- Connect students to community partner organizations for service
- Facilitate reflection workshops and reflection opportunities on service experiences
- Coordinate community partner site visits, orientations and trainings

3. Federal Work Study (FWS) Community Service Sites

- If you have Federal Work Study monies, connect you to community partner organizations with employment opportunities funded by Loyola's off-campus FWS program

4. Undergraduate Research Opportunities (LUROP) www.luc.edu/lurop

- Facilitate partnerships between faculty research and students interested in undergraduate research opportunities
- Promote undergraduate research opportunities (LUROP) to students and faculty
