

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY CHICAGO SCHOOL OF LAW

Intellectual Property Fellowship Application

IP Fellowship: This $ 2500 per year fellowship is open to any entering JD student. Beyond the financial benefits of the fellowship, recipients are automatically admitted to the specialized IP legal writing section; this provides students with the unusual opportunity to learn about IP during their first year of law school. In addition to mastering the traditional legal writing skills, students admitted to the IP legal writing section will receive special lectures on various aspects of IP by the Director of Loyola's IP program.

If you wish to be considered, please complete this form, send it and all supporting materials to the address listed below, or email your application as a MS Word attachment to law-admissions@luc.edu. All documentation must be received by March 1.

You are also required to submit two typewritten essays (with your name at the top of each essay) on the following topics:

- A. In no more than two double-spaced pages, please explain your interest in intellectual property law, as well as your interest in this fellowship opportunity.
- B. In no more than two double-spaced pages, please discuss the most important intellectual property issue in the twenty-first century, including why the issue is so pressing.

Please include a typed resume with this application. Be sure to include any work or extracurricular activities that have particular relevance to your interest in intellectual property law and/or this fellowship.

This scholarship is renewable if the student maintains a 3.0 cumulative G.P.A., and has an interest in participating with the continued development of the Intellectual Property Program. For example, in past years, upper-class student fellows have facilitated panels of speakers and also coordinated increased involvement with Loyola alumni who practice intellectual property.
