

Welcome to Loyola University Chicago School of Law

Loyola University Chicago's promise is "preparing people to lead extraordinary lives," and it's a promise that's reflected in everything we do at the law school.

We're part of a Jesuit educational heritage that, while welcoming students and faculty of all faith traditions, emphasizes academic excellence, ethics, and an active commitment to justice. We believe that the law is a force for positively changing society, and service to others is a theme that runs through all our efforts—inside and outside the classroom.

Our students consistently rate our faculty as exceptionally caring and approachable, resulting in a very supportive environment that helps our students succeed. In addition to challenging classroom learning, our students take advantage of multiple hands-on experiences in our clinics and through externships. Our expanded international curriculum and study-abroad programs provide solid preparation for the increasingly global practice of law, and our Centers of Excellence bring together teaching, research, service, and public policy efforts in child and family law, health law, advocacy, and other specialty areas in which Loyola leads.

The School of Law's expanding and recently renovated facilities enjoy a prime location in the heart of Chicago, which offers cultural and recreational opportunities for every taste and dynamic employment opportunities in private practice, government, business, and virtually every other sector. Chicago's legal community is truly outstanding and welcoming, and Loyola is an engaged and respected part of it.

We're delighted that you'd like to learn more about Loyola University Chicago School of Law. While this viewbook will begin to answer some of your questions, we encourage you to contact us to learn more about the Loyola law community.

POSSIBILITIES, POTENTIAL, AND PURPOSE

Where will your law education lead you? At Loyola University Chicago School of Law, we want our students to explore as many different areas of the law as possible to learn where their interests and talents lie. Whether your interests are in child and family law, health law, litigation, or taxation, Loyola's curriculum and community encourage you to look for ways you can purposefully turn your education to the service of others and society. As alum Kara E. F. Cenar (JD '88, partner at Bryan Cave LLP) describes it, "Loyola taught me that the boundaries to what I could be within the practice of law were mine, and mine alone, to define. I got my start, and my spark, from Loyola." Read on to see how you'll find your own parameters—and your own passions—at Loyola.

COMMUNITY

A Supportive, Caring Environment

Student body and faculty • student organizations • facilities • student life programs

Our students consistently describe their learning environment as friendly, cooperative, and supportive. We're a welcoming community of respectful and responsible professionals in which academic excellence and students' individual strengths are recognized and the well-being of the whole person is emphasized. Our students form lasting relationships with classmates, professors, and alumni.

Loyola law students say the environment of strong support from faculty, administrators, and other students is integral to their success.

“When I think about Loyola, I think about its sense of community. There was, and continues to be, a tremendous sense of collegiality and mutual respect that seems all too rare in today’s competitive graduate and professional programs.”

ACCLAIMED AND ACCESSIBLE FACULTY

The School of Law places top priority on faculty-student interaction, superior teaching, and the kind of individual, personal attention that helps students succeed. Our average class size is 20 students; only 7 percent of our classes have more than 50 students, and a third have fewer than 15 students. Our low student-to-faculty ratio of 14:1 and our faculty’s open-door office policy not only create a wonderful learning community; they foster the development of meaningful, lifelong relationships between faculty and students.

Loyola law professors are women and men from diverse personal and legal backgrounds. Many hold advanced legal degrees such as the LLM or SJD; some also have advanced degrees in business, health sciences, and other disciplines. Balancing their commitment to teaching, Loyola law professors also contribute to the legal community through extensive publishing and research. Most of Loyola’s faculty members have had substantial experience in private practice or in government prior to their teaching careers. Some choose to continue to pursue legal practice on behalf of indigent clients. In recent years, Loyola professors have appeared before the Illinois and U.S. Supreme Courts and, through pro bono work, some have settled major corporate cases. Students have the opportunity to earn credit while participating with faculty in some of these cases, and gain a better understanding of the ethical and professional obligations of attorneys toward their clients.

Adjunct law faculty—judges, practitioners, and legal and business experts—also bring to Loyola’s classrooms their firsthand experience with current legal and professional issues. Our part-time faculty members have many years of teaching experience. Their specialized knowledge and experience significantly enhance the depth and relevance of legal education at Loyola (also see page 38).

DIVERSE AND DYNAMIC STUDENT BODY

Loyola embraces and celebrates diversity of race, faith, and thought. Like the law school's faculty and administrators, the student body represents myriad cultures, backgrounds, and interests.

Demographic highlights of the School of Law student body:

- Entering class size is about 290 for full and part-time divisions combined.
- Loyola law students come from an average of 30 states and several foreign nations.
- They hold undergraduate degrees from more than 130 colleges and universities.
- Nearly 50 percent of students come from outside the state of Illinois.
- Students are approximately 50 percent female, 50 percent male.
- Minority students comprise an average of 24 percent of the student population (the 2010 entering class was 29 percent students of color).
- Many evening division students study for their law degrees while working full time as teachers, physicians, social workers, journalists, accountants, engineers, and bankers.

“Loyola does an amazing job at looking after the well-being of its students. Although academics are important, Loyola tries to keep students focused on the bigger picture. There is more to life than a Contracts exam, and Loyola definitely instills that spirit in its students.”

CRAIG BEAKER, 3L

Student Craig Beaker, conference editor on the Loyola Law Journal, says he chose Loyola for its focus on work-life balance.

Active Student Organizations

Participation in law student organizations offers students the opportunity to develop special interests, leadership abilities, and other important skills. The Student Bar Association, a charter member of the Law School Division of the American Bar Association, sponsors major social events for the law school. Each of the School of Law's more than 30 organizations provides a forum for the exchange of ideas and the information related to a specific area of legal or social interest. Many are affiliated with national networks of similar student or professional groups.

STATE-OF-THE-ART FACILITIES

Loyola School of Law facilities are designed to sustain a sense of community and collaboration. The Philip H. Corboy Law Center is located at 25 E. Pearson St. in the heart of Chicago's vibrant Gold Coast, just off Michigan Avenue and close to public transportation. The School of Law occupies eight floors of this building, sharing the lower levels with students from other divisions of the University. A current renovation of School of Law facilities is resulting in significantly expanded space, including new clinical and student gathering spaces, a technologically advanced ceremonial courtroom, and modern classrooms. Other facility highlights:

• Law Library: The School of Law library, a place to study, conduct research, and collaborate with classmates, houses publications from all branches of government and expert explanations of the law in both print and electronic forms. Tables, carrels, group study rooms, and informal seating provide a variety of spaces for student use. The library's resources, including more than 400,000 volumes, enhance Loyola's broad-based law curriculum and support the research interests of students and faculty. Reference librarians, all of whom hold the JD degree, provide research assistance, teach basic and advanced legal research classes, and offer specialized research training.

• On-campus living option: The Rev. Raymond C. Baumhart, S.J., Residence Hall and Terry Student Center, a $51 million, 25-story high-rise across the street from the Loyola Law Center, offers contemporary living for Loyola professional, graduate, and upper-class undergraduate students in fully furnished apartments with spectacular city views. Amenities and features include 24-hour security, food court and late-night café, fitness center, study lounge, chapel, laundry room, and wireless Internet access.

“Loyola faculty and staff embrace a camaraderie and fellowship with the student body. Where else will law professors serve students bacon and eggs on the eve of finals week? Where else will they auction off a week at their family cottages to benefit the school’s public interest initiatives?”

“When I looked to my left and right in any exam room, I knew my classmates were cheering me on, as I was them. And I have my professors to thank for fostering that sense of kinship.”

Continuous Support for Students

Law school is challenging, but the entire Loyola community is dedicated to ensuring that every student will succeed:

- Guided exploration: Students are trusted to choose their own courses—including first-year electives—but every incoming student is assigned a dean to serve as his or her academic advisor.
- Every student is everyone’s student: All faculty and staff members and administrators view each student as his or her own student.
- Special programs help balance studies and personal commitments: The law school offers programs building social connections, supporting significant others of Loyola law students, and bringing family members to campus to experience the law school.

CURRICULUM

An Extraordinary Academic Experience

Available degrees and certificates • centers of excellence • clinics • international study

Long recognized as a leader in law education, Loyola prepares students to meet the legal profession's constantly evolving needs—and looks toward the law trends of tomorrow. The innovative, broad-based curriculum embraces borderless classes: students learn in live-client clinics and externships, in field studies, and throughout the world. Our solid emphasis on values means that our graduates are prepared to be ethical advocates for the rule of law.

CUTTING-EDGE CURRICULUM

Loyola's curriculum, built on foundational courses, guided exploration, experiential learning, and skills training, has become a model of best practices in legal education. Our exceptional programs in advocacy, child and family law, health law, international law, tax law, education law, and intellectual property have garnered national attention. In an atmosphere that fosters academic rigor and excellence, our classes challenge students to learn and think about the issues of law.

The School of Law curriculum:

- Provides students with the substantive knowledge required for effective and responsible participation in the legal profession
- Fosters student appreciation of the increasingly complex, global, diverse, and interdisciplinary nature of law and legal practice
- Promotes student development of a range of lawyering and professional skills
- Provides substantial opportunities for student participation in real-life practical experiences through live-client clinics, externships, practica, and field work
- Develops student understanding of the fundamental values of the legal profession
- Promotes the Jesuit values of social justice and service to others
- Instills in students the idea of law as a learned profession that requires a lifelong commitment to learning, leadership, and professional development
- Serves the School of Law academic mission (see the inside front cover)

DEGREES AND CERTIFICATE PROGRAMS

In addition to the JD program, the School of Law offers several other degrees:

- For non-legal professionals, the nation's first master of jurisprudence (MJ) degree in business, child and family, and health law
- The master of laws (LLM) degree for practicing lawyers in advocacy, business, child and family, health, and tax law
- The doctor of juridical sciences (SJD) degree for practicing lawyers in health law and policy
- The doctor of laws (DLaw) degree for non-lawyers in health law and policy

The involvement of practicing attorneys and other professionals in various Loyola classes provides the traditional JD student with opportunities to learn the practical aspects and current issues of the legal and business world. JD students may participate in certificate programs to demonstrate their in-depth knowledge in one of many areas. Certificates are available in:

- Advocacy
- Child and family law
- Health law
- International law and practice
- Public interest law
- Tax law

CENTERS OF EXCELLENCE AND OTHER AREAS OF FOCUS

The School of Law's Centers of Excellence bring together teaching, research, public policy, and service initiatives in areas of the law in which Loyola is recognized as a leader.

Dan K. Webb Center for Advocacy

The Dan K. Webb Center for Advocacy joins all the school's programs and activities in the multifaceted discipline of advocacy, linking students, faculty, and alumni active in this area. The program includes courses, lectures, student competitions, and clinical opportunities. A number of scholarships are offered to facilitate participation in advocacy education or recognize students' contributions in advocacy-related activities. Since 2000, Loyola has also been the site for the Midwest Regional Program of the National Institute for Trial Advocacy. (For information on Loyola's many moot court and mock trial opportunities, see page 19.)

Civitas ChildLaw Center

Established almost two decades ago, Loyola's Civitas ChildLaw Center and ChildLaw and Education Institute prepare lawyers to advocate on behalf of children and families in their professional lives. Today, Loyola offers the most comprehensive child and family law curriculum and library collection of any U.S. law school. The ChildLaw Clinic allows students to represent child clients in actual cases under the supervision of nationally recognized clinical faculty. In addition to classroom opportunities, students gain hands-on learning experience in national and international internships and acquire skills in substantive law, courtroom advocacy, and legislative policy. Incoming students may apply for ChildLaw Fellowships, which offer a small stipend for each year a student is in law school, as well as an opportunity to work in the ChildLaw Center during that time.

Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy

For more than 25 years, Loyola School of Law has been a leader in the growing field of health law. Through its Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy, the law school annually offers more than 30 specialized health law courses taught by both full-time and adjunct faculty. Loyola sponsors frequent continuing education programs in the field and offers several scholarships in health law. Many of the health law courses are open to JD students, who also may take advantage of an extensive externship program, as well as participate in a health law moot court competition and the student-run Health Law Society.

International Law and Practice Program

All of the law school's areas of expertise—health law, child and family law, advocacy, business and tax, antitrust, intellectual property—have strong international and comparative components. International and comparative law is not studied only in theoretical, abstract terms, but primarily in the context of values-based professional practice. The school's curriculum, in Chicago and abroad, continually expands and deepens to respond to developing areas of international professional interest. Students have the opportunity to focus on topics of particular interest to them through research projects. (See page 16 for study-abroad opportunities.)

Center for Business and Corporate Governance Law/Tax Law Program

Corporate attorneys are in greater demand than ever before, and their skills today must reflect a range of diverse abilities and knowledge. Today's attorneys must combine rigorous legal training with a strong business acumen. Loyola established the Center for Business and Corporate Governance Law to build on its strong foundation in corporate and tax law, and to draw upon the insight and expertise of practitioners, scholars, jurists, business managers, and students.

Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies

The Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies is a non-partisan independent academic center designed to explore the impact of antitrust enforcement on the individual consumer and the public, and to shape public policy in these areas. The institute sponsors conferences, academic symposia, and a unique student fellowship in which law students develop, through coursework, externships, and participation in the work of the institute, the ability to practice and shape policy in the fields of antitrust and consumer protection.

Intellectual Property Program

Loyola offers a variety of courses focused on intellectual property (IP) complemented by a balanced academic program that strengthens IP expertise. For example, for students who intend to litigate intellectual property matters, a strong trial practice program including courses and oral advocacy competitions augments IP coursework. Students interested in the corporate aspects of intellectual property can select from numerous courses that develop professional skills in areas such as new venture creation, entertainment law, and international business transactions. For students with a biology or health care interest, the health law curriculum combined with intellectual property coursework is another option. Two renewable intellectual property fellowships are offered yearly to first-year students.

Each July, Loyola proudly hosts the Patent Law Interview Program, the largest single-practice job fair in the country. More than 100 law schools and 200 legal employers from all over the country participate in this highly successful interviewing and networking event.

CLINICAL PROGRAMS

Inspired by the Jesuit philosophy that promotes service to others, the law school encourages students to contribute to society while gaining vital practical experience.

The Loyola Community Law Center, created in the early 1980s, was Loyola's first law clinic. It gives students real-world experience in representing Chicago-area residents who cannot afford legal services. Representing clients in civil legal cases under the supervision of clinical faculty, students acquire valuable first-hand knowledge about the essential skills involved in the practice of law: client interviewing and counseling, case planning and negotiation, fact investigation, and oral and written advocacy.

The Child and Family Law Clinic, founded in 1995, gives students the opportunity to develop skills needed to represent children by serving as children's lawyers in cases involving pediatric law. Most are abuse or neglect cases, but some are delinquency, special education, mental health, or other types of cases involving children. Advocating in court, with the Department of Children and Family Services and other public and private agencies, law students often work in tandem with the clinic's social worker or social work students.

The Federal Tax Clinic allows students, under close faculty supervision, to represent low-income taxpayers before the Internal Revenue Service and U.S. Tax Court. The clinic, established in 1988, was the first of its kind in the Chicago area and remains one of a limited number in the nation. The clinic offers students practical experience in tax law through work with clients involved in actual disputes.

The Business Law Clinic, established in 1999, not only focuses on small-business counseling, but also educates students about the transactional practice of law. Under the supervision of clinical attorneys, students put into practice the business-oriented knowledge and skills they have learned in the classroom by providing non-litigation-oriented legal services to small business entrepreneurs and others involved in community development.

The Health Justice Project, launched in 2010, gives students the opportunity to provide effective representation to low-income clients. Students work in collaboration with health care providers to overcome the social and systemic barriers that prevent long-term health and stability through legal and non-legal remedies.

“It’s because of the education that I received at Loyola, both classroom and clinical, that I’ve experienced such success. Loyola prepared me to walk into a courtroom without hand holding to conduct hearings and to vigorously advocate for my clients, and it instilled a sense of social justice within me.”

DENNERICKA BROOKS (JD '07)

Legal Assistance Foundation of Metropolitan Chicago

Alum Dennericka Brooks stays in contact with former Loyola law professors to chat and ask for advice. "That's a priceless experience," she says.

DUAL-DEGREE OPTIONS

Cross-disciplinary study enriches law students' understanding of the possibilities of the law and leads to broader professional and networking opportunities. Law students may pursue an additional Loyola degree simultaneously with their law studies, acquiring dual degrees in less time than it would normally take to earn the two degrees independently.

Dual degrees are offered in conjunction with Loyola's Department of Political Science, Graduate School of Business, School of Social Work, and School of Education. Visit LUC.edu/law for details on admission requirements and the application process for the following dual degrees:

- JD/MA in political science
- JD/MBA
- JD/MSW
- JD/MA in comparative law and education

GLOBAL LEARNING

Now spanning five continents, Loyola's international study programs deepen students' understanding of transnational and comparative law. Participants gain firsthand knowledge of the legal, social, and political environment of another country.

European Legal Institutions Summer Program

This one-week program, based in Strasbourg, France, combines classroom study and site visits, taking students to major European Union sites including the Council of Europe, the European Court of Human Rights, and the Parliament of the European Union.

Summer Program in Rome

Since 1983, a four-week summer program of international and comparative law courses is offered at the University's John Felice Rome Center in Italy. Students trained in the common law tradition have the opportunity to study and observe Italian civil law practice. Participants work with Loyola faculty and foreign law professors, attend guest lectures, tour legal institutions in Rome, and take cultural excursions to Florence, Venice, and Pompeii. Recent guest lecturers include U.S. Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia.

Summer Program in Beijing

Loyola's newest international study opportunity is a three-week summer China program, based at Loyola's Beijing Center on the campus of the Beijing University of International Business and Economics. In addition to classroom study, students are exposed to guest lectures on Chinese history and culture, participate in guided excursions to sites in Beijing and the surrounding region, and have access to a professional guide and interpreter.

London Advocacy Program

In this annual program, 12 Loyola law students are immersed in the world of the British barrister in London for 15 days. After a series of lectures at the Middle Temple Inn of Court, students visit historic "Old Bailey," compare the British and the American legal systems in discussions with barristers, judges, and court administrators, and tour various other legal institutions in London.

International Children's Rights Initiative

This international and comparative law seminar uses a collaborative immersion approach to learning about a particular country and its legal system, with emphasis on legal issues affecting children and families. The course includes a required service learning component in the field over spring break. Past seminars have focused on Tanzania, India, Thailand, and Vietnam.

Comparative Law Seminar: Legal Systems in the Americas

In this optional week in Chile, students learn how lawyers in Latin America are educated, the political and legal structures in which they operate, and the conceptual framework with which they approach legal issues. This program typically occurs for one week during the spring semester.

Health Law Field Study

Every other year, the Institute for Health Law sponsors a conference on Derecho de Salud (Health Law) with the law faculty of Interamerican University of Puerto Rico (Facultad de Derecho de Universidad Interamericana de Puerto Rico). The conference is held in San Juan and brings together a number of medical and legal speakers from Puerto Rico and the mainland United States. Every year, students in the Access to Health Care course complete a spring break immersion in locations such as Detroit.

Lawyer Skills Training Competition Teams: Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot

Students who enroll in the International Commercial Arbitration and the Convention on Contracts for the International Sales of Goods course in the fall semester are eligible to try out for the Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot and the Willem C. Vis (East) International Commercial Arbitration Moot teams. The teams have the opportunity to compete in Vienna and Hong Kong, respectively.

COCURRICULUM

A Focus on Building Skills and Expertise

Moot court and mock trial competitions • student-edited publications • conferences and special events

Cocurricular and extracurricular activities are a key part of Loyola law students' experience. Participation in student competitions, publications, and organizations further develops legal knowledge and skills and helps you sharpen your focus in your areas of interest. Through these initiatives, you'll build professional and social networks that last long past graduation.

Students participating in competitions receive thorough coaching from faculty and alumni volunteers.

STUDENT PUBLISHING OPPORTUNITIES

Loyola students publish their research through seven different student-authored and student-edited law reviews, through independent study and directed research projects with professors, and through coauthorships with their faculty mentors.

- Students who work on the Loyola Law Journal gain extensive training in the analysis of legal problems and the logical and concise presentation of legal issues. This quarterly student-edited publication presents works by distinguished scholars within the legal profession, as well as notes and case comments written by students.
- The Loyola Consumer Law Review is the only publication of its kind in the nation. Focusing on current developments in consumer law, it covers such issues as advertising, financing, debt collection, product safety, professional services, insurance, and consumer credit.
- The Annals of Health Law focuses on the practical analysis of major trends in health law both in the United States and abroad; it is peer-reviewed in cooperation with the National Health Lawyers Association.
- The Children's Legal Rights Journal, edited in conjunction with the American Bar Association Center on Children and the Law, provides practitioners in law and related fields with the practical resources they need to be informed advocates for their child clients.
- The Public Interest Law Reporter (PILR), a forum for sharing ideas and news in public interest law, serves as a catalyst for further discussion, research, and action (also see page 22).
- The International Law Review addresses issues of international scope, and is edited and published by the International Law Society.
- The ChildLaw and Education Forum is an electronic journal that publishes student articles addressing complex and current issues in the area of education law and policy.

“Loyola gave me the opportunity to participate in symposia, colloquia, and professional organizations, and to be part of one of the top moot court programs in the nation, which helped me hone my advocacy and public speaking skills. That set me apart from other candidates in the job market.”

CONFERENCES, SYMPOSIA, AND SPECIAL LECTURES

Loyola's growing reputation as a national law school is reflected in the prestigious conferences and symposia hosted at the Philip H. Corboy Law Center, which bring together academics, students, and members of the legal profession to share perspectives on today's top legal issues.

Regularly scheduled events include:

- Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Lecture
- Wing-Tat Lee Lecture in International and Comparative Law
- Philip H. Corboy Lecture in Trial Advocacy
- ChildLaw and Education Institute Conference
- Public Interest Law Reporter Symposium
- Loyola Law Journal Conference
- Loyola Consumer Law Review Lecture
- International Law Review Conference

Each year, the Public Interest Convocation honors a distinguished lawyer who has devoted a career to public service, as well as a lawyer who has committed a substantial part of his or her practice to pro bono service. In keeping with Loyola's commitment to exposing students to diverse perspectives, the School of Law regularly invites notable figures from the legal and other professions to share their views on a variety of topics.

Lecturers at recent events have included:

- U.S. Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia
- Michael Eric Dyson, PhD, scholar and cultural critic on issues of race
- Richard J. Goldstone, former justice of the Constitutional Court of South Africa and chief prosecutor of the United Nations Institute for Criminal Tribunal
- Scott Turow, author
- Patrick Fitzgerald, U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois
- Dan K. Webb, nationally renowned litigator

SERVICE

A Deep and Broad Commitment to the Public Interest

Curricular emphasis on social justice • loan repayment assistance for alumni in public interest law • clinical and volunteer opportunities

More than any other characteristic, what sets Loyola School of Law apart is its dedication to using knowledge in the service of others. Social justice and care for those in need are key tenets of Loyola's Jesuit mission—and our community members, who represent all faith traditions, continuously live out that mission. Public service and public interest activities are integral to the Loyola law experience, with virtually all students, faculty, administrators, and staff participating in service efforts at some level.

Our students come to Loyola believing that the law is a profession with the potential to significantly change society for the better. The School of Law supports and expands that belief in the classroom, in the community, and across the city, developing our students' lifelong commitment to helping others.

“More than anything else, I was drawn to Loyola because of its deep commitment to service and to justice. Each and every law student is educated and trained to become an exceptional advocate as well as one who is passionate about contributing positively to our society.”

ELIZABETH CHASE NELSON (JD '10)

PUBLIC SERVICE PROGRAM

The Public Service Program serves as a central point of organization for curricular and extracurricular activities at the law school. Volunteering begins at orientation with a day of service. The center advocates and facilitates student pro bono service and provides career support to students interested in public service employment after graduation. A certificate program in public interest law was recently added.

PUBLIC INTEREST LAW SOCIETY (PILS)

Most of Loyola's many student organizations (see page 7) actively engage in service projects, but PILS is an organization uniquely focused on promoting careers in public interest law.

PILS raises money to fund summer fellowships for students working in public service, including hosting the popular annual PILS Auction. The society also publishes the Public Interest Law Reporter highlighting legal developments in human rights, economic justice, criminal justice, the environment, and governance. The annual PILR Symposium is a daylong conference focusing on high-profile legal issues.

COMMUNITY-FOCUSED CLINICS

Linking classroom study with hands-on experience, Loyola's several clinics encourage students to contribute to society while gaining vital practical experiences. (See page 14 for more information on clinical studies at the Loyola Community Law Center, Child and Family Law Clinic, Business Law Clinic, Federal Tax Clinic, and Health Justice Project.)

LOAN REPAYMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

The rising burden of educational debt can make it difficult for law graduates to pursue public interest careers. Loyola's Loan Repayment Assistance program provides awards of up to $5,000 per year to recent law graduates who are engaged in full-time public service employment.

So Many Ways to Serve

How do you want to extend a hand? Whatever your area of interest, the School of Law can help you find your place to serve. Here's a sampling of cocurricular and extracurricular initiatives from which to choose:

Public Service Convocation—

Annual event recognizing outstanding achievements in public service and pro bono service by members of the bar.

Meet the Public Service Employers

Reception—An opportunity for students to meet and network with attorneys from non-profit and government sectors.

Loyola's Street Law and Pipeline

Programs—Longtime programs encouraging Chicago's students, particularly low-income and minority youth, to consider law as a career.

Race and the Law Symposium—

An annual topical program organized by Loyola's minority law student organizations.

Life After Innocence—An advocacy initiative for innocent people adversely affected by the criminal justice system, helping them reenter society and claim their rights as citizens.

Hunger Week at Loyola—Law students, alumni, faculty, and staff participate in boxing food and providing meal services for various Chicago service organizations as well as sponsoring creative fundraisers to raise money for hunger.

Law-Related Education—

Students visit a local detention center to educate residents about the legal process.

Chicago Training Center and Harlan Mentoring—

Students help tutor Chicago-area high-school students.

Find your favorite—Loyola law students continually identify new volunteer opportunities in their areas of interest. Recent student initiatives have included volunteering for Chicago Legal Aid for Incarcerated Mothers, guarding voter rights through the Election Protection Program, and participating in the Martin Luther King Jr. Day of Service across Chicago.

CHICAGO

A World-Class City

As one of the nation's leading centers of law, commerce, and government, Chicago offers unlimited opportunities for law students to enrich their academic pursuits. Chicago is home to many of the nation's top trial lawyers, and the city's juvenile law system is one of the largest in the country. You'll make important connections with professional colleagues—as well as with the many Loyola law alumni practicing in the city—in the teaching classroom and through Loyola events, externships, volunteer projects, and other extracurricular activities.

STELLAR LOCATION

The School of Law's location off North Michigan Avenue puts it in the heart of the bustling city and gives students immediate access to Chicago's many corporations and organizations, as well as to recognized experts in the legal field and the corporate world. The Water Tower Campus is also steps from some of Chicago's best and most varied shopping, dining, cultural, and recreational opportunities.

A LIVABLE CITY

In addition to being a major U.S. tourist destination, Chicago is one of the most livable major cities in the country. Chicago's diverse neighborhoods and communities are among the many features that make the city singularly appealing and interesting. Many students live in such neighborhoods as Lakeview, Lincoln Park, Wicker Park, the South Loop, and Hyde Park, which are convenient to public transportation and offer the benefits of urban living. Neighborhoods including the Loop, Gold Coast, River North, and Streeterville are within walking distance of the School of Law. Some students choose to live right on campus at Baumhart Hall (see page 8).

The CTA U-Pass allows students to access the CTA trains and buses 24 hours a day, seven days a week, while classes are in session.

Loyola's Water Tower Campus, home to the School of Law, is adjacent to North Michigan Avenue, Chicago's famed Magnificent Mile.

A Foundation for Professional Success

Career services • externships • successful alumni base

Loyola's combination of classroom, clinical, and cocurricular experiences spells solid preparation for career success—and our career services and externship programs are dedicated to helping students find satisfying employment after graduation. The proof of the value of a Loyola law degree is in our high-achieving alumni base, which generously stays involved in the life of the law school to help today's students achieve their own career success.

National Alumni Presence

CAREER SERVICES

Loyola’s Office of Career Services is committed to assisting Loyola law students and alumni at the various stages in their career development. The Career Services staff, including counselors who are lawyers with practice experience in the private and public sectors, help students assess their career goals, explore the many and varied applications of a legal education, and make the transition from school to a professional career. Graduates typically pursue a variety of career choices.

Career Services staff members are available to counsel and assist all students and alumni in discovering and reaching their career goals. Services include a year-round, on-campus employer interview and recruitment program, and continuous postings of employment opportunities for legal and public service/pro bono positions. Other offerings include seminars on recruitment by practicing attorneys, alumni, and faculty; resumé preparation, review, and critique; interviewing techniques and strategies; individual counseling sessions; and job search strategies.

The Office of Career Services also has information on law firms, corporations, judicial clerkships, government agencies, and legal service/public interest programs. Information on academic, international, and fellowship opportunities, as well as non-traditional legal careers, can also be provided.

The School of Law is an active member of the National Association for Law Placement (NALP) and Equal Justice Works.

Student Lara Elborno is combining classroom work and summer study abroad programs to prepare herself for a career in international law.

EXTERNSHIPS BOOST HANDS-ON EXPERIENCE

The School of Law externship program grants academic credit to students for supervised work in a variety of legal settings in the Chicago area. Loyola offers externship opportunities in six categories: judicial, criminal, government/agency, corporate, health, and child law. Students may choose from more than 50 legal services organizations.

Students receive two or three hours of credit for working under the supervision of experienced attorneys. A Loyola instructor is assigned to each group of externs to ensure that the experience contributes to the students' professional development. Practica in mediation and criminal appellate work are also available to upper-class students.

Eminently Employable Graduates

“Loyola invests in people. It has an excellent reputation for training future lawyers to advocate in the courtroom and on paper, and its graduates have set standards of excellence as trial lawyers, appellate lawyers, judges, and politicians. Most importantly, Loyola values character. Its investment doesn’t end with graduation—I still feel part of the Loyola family.”

ACCOMPLISHED ALUMNI BASE STAYS INVOLVED WITH TODAY'S STUDENTS

Among the School of Law's greatest strengths are the more than 7,500 alumni who reside and practice in every state and in more than 20 countries. Loyola graduates excel in all areas of the law and currently hold distinguished positions within state and federal judiciaries; law firms and companies of all sizes; higher education; local, state, and national government; and public service.

In recent years, Loyola law alumni have held major leadership positions in the Chicago Bar Association—the largest local bar association in the world—the Illinois State Bar Association, the National Conference of Bar Examiners, the American Association of Trial Lawyers, and the American Bar Association.

Loyola prides itself on the active participation of its alumni in the School of Law and in the University. School of Law graduates continue to be significantly involved with students through their support of scholarships, career service programs, mentoring, and teaching. A large percentage of alumni participate in the Law Alumni Association, which sponsors social and educational activities that create a dynamic professional network.

THE APPLICATION PROCESS

Admission Procedure

Loyola School of Law receives an average of 4,715 applications each year for approximately 280 seats: 210 in the full-time division, 70 in the part-time evening division, and 10 in the part-time day division. The admission criteria and requirements are the same for all divisions.

Preparation for Law School

All candidates for law school must have earned a baccalaureate degree. No one undergraduate curriculum or major is viewed as distinctly ideal for the study of law. Graduates of the law school have completed degrees in numerous areas of study, ranging from agriculture to zoology. Applicants are evaluated individually, based upon their talents and achievements, the academic rigor of their undergraduate programs, and the unique qualities their studies bring to the classroom.

Accelerated Admission Program

The School of Law has established a program whereby exceptionally well-qualified students in the undergraduate colleges of Loyola University Chicago are eligible for admission to the School of Law after the completion of their third year of college. Students admitted to the School of Law under this program will receive their undergraduate degree upon the successful completion of the first year of law school. Further information about this program is available from the pre-law advisor of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Loyola University Chicago School of Law accepts applications October 1–March 1. The recommended deadline to complete your file is January 15.

Early Notification

Candidates may elect to submit all necessary materials for their application files by January 15. If all items are received by this date, an admission decision will be mailed by February 15. There is no binding commitment with this decision. The deadline for acceptance of the offer by the candidates is the same as for those who elect not to participate in the early notification program. This program is of particular relevance to applicants applying for specialized scholarships.

The Application File

The application file should contain:

- The completed application (a link to the online application or a PDF copy of the application can be found at LUC.edu/law/admission/apply)
- Two letters of recommendation
- Personal statement, as described on the application
- Completed CAS report

THE APPLICATION FEE IS WAIVED FOR ALL ENTERING JD CANDIDATES. You must create an LSAC.org account in order to complete the application online.

THIS INFORMATION ONLY APPLIES TO ENTERING STUDENTS. TRANSFER AND VISITING STUDENTS MUST USE THE APPLICATION FOUND ON THE LAW SCHOOL WEB SITE (LUC.edu/law/admission/apply).

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

The decision to attend Loyola University Chicago School of Law is a lifelong investment that promises many rewards. At Loyola, we recognize that many students do not have the immediate access to resources to pay for their law school education. Therefore, Loyola has taken the necessary measures that allow most students, regardless of socioeconomic background, to attain the necessary funding to pursue their educational aspirations. As the cost of professional education continues to rise, more students are turning to financial aid to finance their education.

Financial assistance for School of Law students takes two forms: academic/merit-based scholarships and need-based financial assistance. In the past several years, more than 80 percent of the entering class received funding from the law school. For most students, this was at least ¼ tuition.

International Students: Financial assistance is not available for international students. You will need to provide proof of financial ability to pay for tuition and living expenses.

Transfer Students: For transfer students to Loyola University Chicago School of Law, the sole source of funding for education is loans. Make sure that a copy of the FAFSA report is sent to Loyola University Chicago (School Code 001710). It is the student's responsibility to apply for the Stafford Loan and Grad PLUS loans.

Scholarships and Fellowships

Since 1988, the School of Law has been able, through a generous grant from the University, to award a number of academic scholarships to highly qualified applicants selected by the Faculty Committee on Admission. These merit scholarships are renewable in subsequent years.

Annually, the School of Law awards special scholarships and fellowships to entering students who meet the individual criteria established. Several of these scholarships require separate application forms, which are available at LUC.edu/law/financialaid.

Federally Based Aid

Students may be considered for federally based aid, including the Perkins Loan, Federal Work Study Program, and Stafford Loan programs. Grad PLUS Loans are also available. All applicants who wish to apply for any financial assistance must file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The FAFSA Federal School code is 001710. Applicants should file the FAFSA before February 15 preceding the academic year for which the student is seeking assistance. (www.fafsa.ed.gov)

Completed applications for financial assistance must be on file with the Office of Admission and Financial Assistance by March 1 for entering students. The application for admission is considered complete when all of the above items are received by the office. Files are reviewed in order of completion date.

A limited number of grant awards also are made to incoming students on the basis of demonstrated financial need, as determined by the result of the FAFSA. These grants are funded primarily through the law alumni annual campaign and are renewable if financial need continues in subsequent years.

Federal Stafford Loans

Federally insured loans that are subsidized and/or unsubsidized, totaling $20,500 of eligibility annually for qualified borrowers.

Federal Perkins Loans

Limited funds awarded to qualified previous Perkins Loan recipients.

Grad PLUS

In addition to the federal loans, Grad PLUS loans are also available. Students are eligible for funding up to the cost of education as determined annually by the university. (Note: These loan programs are generally based on creditworthiness.)

OTHER LAW SCHOOL FUNDING

Research Assistants

Upper-class positions working in tandem with faculty research.

Federal Work Study

Positions in law school offices, library, and specified public agencies through a program subsidized by federal funding.
