Understanding Leadership Through a Gendered Lens

October 27, 2009

7:00pm – 8:30pm

Dumbach Hall, Room 117

Is there a specific female style of leadership? Participants will understand how collaborative, empowering, consensual, and group-think leadership are often gendered as female and interpret such categorization. We will also look to current female leaders, both globally and nationally, to better understand the leadership styles of some women today and how they work to transform the idea of female leadership. Finally, we will address the need for inclusivity as a key leadership foundation in which all individuals are embraced regardless of race, class, gender, sexuality, and other forms of oppression.
