Q: What does the Robert R. Otremba Chemistry Scholarship mean to you?

This scholarship provided by Mr. Otremba’s generous estate gift is a tremendous help. My family does not have the means to pay for my college education without taking out significant loans. With this scholarship, achieving financial stability is more feasible for us, and there’s far less uncertainty about my ability to finish my education here at Loyola.

Q: What are your future ambitions?

I am a freshman majoring in biochemistry and potentially molecular biology with a pre-health track. My ambition at Loyola is to be an exceptional biochemistry scholar and become deeply involved with bacterial physiology research. Research in particular would not have been a feasible option for me without the support of this scholarship. Beyond Loyola, I hope to get accepted into medical school and become a practicing physician and a research oncologist.
A GIFT (ANNUITY) THAT KEEPS ON GIVING

A charitable gift annuity, as the name suggests, is part gift—a contribution of money or property to Loyola—and part annuity—an arrangement where the University agrees to pay your designated annuitant(s) fixed payments for life.

This annuity concept is familiar to many who remember what it was like before the advent of IRAs and 401(k)s. In those days, most people could count on a comfortable old age only if they “did it themselves.” Commercial annuities were sold as a way to accomplish individual retirement programs; people deposited money with a company in exchange for the assurance that they would never run out of income.

In this respect, a gift annuity is not so different from those commercial annuities. In exchange for a sum of money transferred to Loyola by a donor, Loyola agrees to pay the designated annuitant(s)—usually the donor or the donor and a spouse—a set annuity for life. These payments are backed by the full assets of the University. As with a commercial annuity, a portion of the annual payment—sometimes a substantial portion—is tax-free over the annuitant’s life expectancy as a return of investment.

But here the similarity with a commercial annuity ends. As the name implies, a gift annuity is also part gift. When the last beneficiary has passed on, Loyola receives the funds remaining in the annuity account.

This gift component is very important, because it generates two significant tax benefits. First, since a portion of the gift is treated as a return of investment, the donor gets an immediate income-tax deduction. Second, if long-term capital-gain property is used to fund the charitable contribution, the donor gets an immediate income-tax deduction plus a step-up in the basis of the property. This means the donor will have a lower capital-gain tax when the property is sold.

How is the charitable tax deduction for my gift determined?

The charitable deduction is equal to the difference between the amount of the contribution and the value of payments to the annuitant(s). Deductions are lower for younger people, because they are likely to live longer. Similarly, deductions are lower when there are two annuitants rather than one.

Because of its simplicity, a gift annuity typically does not require a great deal of time or expense to complete, making it suitable for gifts of any size and providing several benefits to the donor. Sometimes a gift annuity can be the best choice for the largest gifts.

YOUR ANNUITY PAYMENTS

The payments are a fixed amount and generally depend on the number (up to two) and ages of the beneficiaries. For instance, income would be higher for an annuity payable for life to one person, age 70, than to a couple, both 70, because of the longer combined life expectancies of the couple.

EXAMPLE: John and Mary, both 75, make a gift of $25,000 in return for an annuity of $1,250 per year as long as either of them lives. The gift generates a current-income-tax deduction of $9,237. A portion of the annual income is tax free. For the remainder of their life expectancies, $961 of the $1,250 annual payments will be tax-free.

A gift annuity also offers the opportunity to reduce capital-gain tax when long-term appreciated property is used to fund it. And the reduced amount of tax that is payable can be spread over the donor’s life expectancy.

EXAMPLE: Fred, 73, owns stock worth $25,000 that he bought nine years ago for $12,500. If he sells the stock, he will realize a gain of $12,500 and will owe $1,875 in capital-gain tax at the 15% rate. Instead, Fred uses the stock to fund a gift annuity that will pay him $1,375 per year for life. By doing so, Fred has to recognize only $7,236 of gain, and he can spread that over his life expectancy of 13.8 years at a rate of $525 per year. Plus he receives a charitable deduction of $16,522.

The IRA Charitable Rollover is back—and this time it is permanent!

Charitably minded taxpayers have enthusiastically embraced the IRA charitable rollover as an opportunity to transfer up to $100,000 each year to charity without it being treated as a taxable distribution. Despite its popularity since being introduced in 2006, the IRA charitable rollover has faced extinction several times and had actually expired on December 31, 2013. Now it has been reinstated and made permanent.

YOUR GIFT QUALIFIES FOR BENEFITS IF:
- You are 70 1/2 or older at the time of your gift
- The transfer is made directly from your IRA to Loyola
- You made a total IRA gift(s) does not exceed $100,000
- Your gift is made outright

DIRECT GIFTS FROM YOUR IRA TO LOYOLA CAN:
- Be an easy and convenient way to make a gift from one of your major assets
- Be excluded from your gross income: a tax-free rollover
- Count toward your required minimum distribution

TWO WAYS TO MAKE A GIFT FROM YOUR IRA INCLUDE:

ONE-STEP GIFT. If you meet the above conditions and make a transfer from your IRA to Loyola, your transfer will be treated as a qualified rollover.

TWO-STEP GIFT. If you own appreciated securities outside your IRA, consider giving some of those securities to the University, and then take a cash distribution from your IRA to replace those securities or purchase other investments. You obtain a stepped-up cost basis, and you receive a deduction that can be used to offset the taxable distribution.

If a gift from your IRA doesn’t qualify now, keep these benefits in mind while making your future philanthropic and financial plans.
