This summer marked the close of a successful Rome Center campaign—Insieme per il futuro—which is creating attractive new and refurbished spaces and expanded programming on our thriving campus. You made it happen! Thanks to your generosity and the support of many people in the Rome Center extended family, we surpassed our cash goal of $4 million and have already accomplished great things.

Building on the success of Insieme, we now look ahead to Phase II of enhancing the Rome Center experience with Avanti! We will share more details about this new campaign next spring, but for now we hope you enjoy reading about the successes of Insieme and look forward to many more good things to come.

The Anthony and Susan Brazier Piazza Information Commons
Dear Alumni and Friends,

It is with great joy that I share the incredible success of the Insieme per il futuro campaign. The dream we share of shaping the future of the John Felice Rome Center is here, and its impact is extraordinary.

As you will see in this issue, the abundant generosity of our alumni is humbling. Because of you, our students have a beautiful, up-to-date facility to call their own. New and more useful spaces are aplenty at the JFRC—a new information commons library, a more functional mensa for sharing meals, and large gathering spaces for conferences and speakers to name a few. In addition, we have expanded scholarship support and increased our endowment to support our students’ studies and travels in perpetuity. We are so appreciative of your commitment to the JFRC and hope you in turn take pride in knowing that you are playing such an important role in shaping its future and the future of our students.

While the changes we have made with Insieme are immense, we are not resting. Our work at the JFRC is not done. We will continue to improve our new home and plan for the future. That is why we are launching Avanti!, the second phase of our development vision, which includes ambitious plans for a new building on campus. This building will increase our study spaces, add more dormitories and faculty apartments, and improve the overall study-abroad experience. Whether you name a tile on our new Alumni Wall, remember the John Felice Rome Center in your estate plans, or make an annual gift, you are investing in the future of this life-changing program, one deeply rooted in Jesuit values and academic excellence. Together, we can fulfill John Felice’s vision of a permanent “home away from home” in Rome.

Again, thank you for your extraordinary partnership. While the study-abroad experience touches lives in profound and sometimes surprising ways, too, does philanthropy. At the JFRC, we see this in all of the ways that our generous donors enrich the student experience, expand scholarship opportunities for deserving students, and renovate and build facilities that will become a 21st-century campus. The JFRC’s accomplishments are your accomplishments.

With appreciation,

Emilio Iodice
Director, JFRC
Vice President, Loyola University Chicago

You made it happen!

* Insieme per il futuro focused on building an even better Rome Center. Our approach was multi-pronged:

- Increase scholarship support for students
- Renovate, update, and beautify facilities on campus
- Build our endowment to ensure the future of the center
- Expand student programming through unrestricted support

Thanks to the generosity of our many friends and supporters, we surpassed our $4 million goal for outright gifts and have begun an important transformation in the life of the Rome Center. Throughout Insieme, we saw tremendous growth in alumni giving and event participation, and many of our alumni reconected with the JFRC in meaningful ways.

To demonstrate the University’s commitment to the JFRC, Loyola University Chicago matched outright gifts on a one-to-one basis, doubling our donors’ impact. There is no question that the support of our dedicated and passionate alumni made this incredible success possible. See pages 7–9 for a list of campaign donors.

2 UNRESTRICTED SUPPORT

Unrestricted support, or the director’s fund, provides flexible funding that is an important component in JFRC operations, academics, and student life. Whether it’s through sponsored study trips like the Poland symposium and a human rights trip to Malta, service programs such as the JFRC Interfaith Retreat, expanded fall and spring semester new-student orientation weekends, or internships, unrestricted support created new opportunities for students to broaden their horizons and be fully immersed in learning.

3 SCHOLARSHIPS

Over 80 percent of students attending the JFRC need financial aid to do so. Insieme saw incredible support for scholarships and put a JFRC education within reach for more students. The Vogelheim Scholarship, the Carol T. Robbins Endowed Scholarship, the Anthony and Susan Brazier Piazza Scholarship, and the Domenico Zipoli Scholarship Fund—just to name a few—help fulfill Loyola’s Jesuit mission of educating students from all backgrounds.

“Studying abroad in Rome is one of the best decisions I’ve ever made. I thank God for the Vogelheim Scholarship, which had a huge part in me being in Rome. I have grown a great deal from this experience, and I will never forget this.”

–JENAI BOOKER (JFRC FALL ’11, BS ’12)
New director of development

We are pleased to announce that Janet Myers (JFRC ’89–’90, BS ’93) has joined the Rome Center’s Advancement team in Chicago as its director of development.

Janet graduated from Loyola University Chicago’s College of Arts and Sciences with a degree in psychology in 1993. As a member of the Rome Center class of 1989–90, she has firsthand knowledge of the unique and transformational opportunities that the University’s study-abroad program offers to its students. She brings over a decade of fundraising experience to the JFRC, coming most recently from Rush University Medical Center in Chicago, where she served as director of development during their recent and highly successful $385 million capital campaign.

Join us in welcoming our new colleague and fellow JFRC alumna! You can reach Janet at jmyers7@LUC.edu or 312.915.7652.

Call for alumni “hot spots” in Rome

The Alumni Relations team requests a list of your favorite hidden gems and hot spots in Rome—whether a restaurant, bar, gelateria, or landmark—to recommend to current JFRC students. Conceived by JFRC Student Life Assistant Steven Metzmaker (JFRC Fall ’12), this is a unique opportunity for you to connect with current students, sharing your memories and helping them make some incredible ones of their own.

Please submit your recommendation form at LUC.edu/jfcalumni/romerecommendations, and Alumni Relations will send the list to Rome. From there, Steven and his colleagues will plan the outings, taking pictures along the way, so we can post them to Facebook and e-mail some to you. If you have any questions, please e-mail Casey Allison at calliso@LUC.edu.
A labor of love

This fall, the Rome Center bids a fond farewell to a beloved member of its community, the outgoing dean of faculty, Dr. Susana Cavallo. Dr. Cavallo began her role there seven years ago, and in that time she has helped enhance the quality of Rome Center faculty and programming.

"Emilio Iodice and I went to Rome as a team," says Dr. Cavallo. "I couldn’t have done it without him and our colleague Marilyn Vitale. Probably the most important thing Father Garanzini wanted us to do was Romanize, Italianize, and Europeanize the education at the JFRC. He wanted us to offer students an education that they could only get in Rome, and that’s what we have strived to do."

Dr. Cavallo is a creative person who values that trait in others and believes that to be an asset in college students. "For those students with creative tendencies, there wasn’t really an arena to explore that at the Rome Center," she says. "For those who were not writers or artists or music majors, I thought Rome would be a good chance for them to stretch themselves and try something different. So I created a mini version of the University’s Department of Fine and Performing Arts there."

This includes courses in voice for non-voice majors where they sing Italian opera, creative writing classes where students take their journals out in front of the Pantheon, theatre courses for non-theatre majors, and courses in filmmaking, drawing, and sculpture. At the end of every year, there is a two-day celebration of the creative arts.

Other accomplishments she helped drive include the Rome Start program, which attracts international students to spend their first full Loyola undergraduate year at the Rome Center and then continue their degree in Chicago. Also, coming from a family of student athletes, Dr. Cavallo helped create a “third semester”—an academic extension from mid-May through late July that offers as much as 15 hours of academic credit and attracts students that otherwise wouldn’t be able to come to Rome, like student athletes, pre-health and other majors that are especially rigorous.

“When I started at the Rome Center, there were almost no business courses,” says Dr. Cavallo. “John Felice believed very strongly in the necessity of preparing ethical leaders. One of the first things I did was work with our business school to find out what would be the most important courses for business majors in any area to take. We added those courses, and now we’re able to attract students that otherwise wouldn’t be able to come to Rome, like student athletes, pre-health and other majors that are especially rigorous.”

Before Rome, Dr. Cavallo worked as a full professor in Loyola’s Department of Modern Languages and Literatures. She had been at Loyola for 25 years before former provost Dr. John Frendreis asked her to take this job in Rome. This year marks her 33rd year at Loyola. "I have been committed throughout my working career to Jesuit education and seeing to it that the Rome program followed the same guidelines for excellence and diversity that we have at home in Chicago, tenets that were revitalized by Father Garanzini," says Dr. Cavallo.

Those who work with Dr. Cavallo can attest to her decades-long energy and passion for her work. "I’ve known Susana since summer 2011," says Dr. Kathy Getz, dean of Loyola’s Quinlan School of Business. “She is among the most enthusiastic people I’ve met at Loyola, and it’s always been a pleasure to be in her company. She and I have worked closely on a partnership between Loyola University Chicago and Loyola University Andalucia. This dual degree will be just one part of her legacy as she leaves the JFRC and eventually returns to Chicago.”

Sarah Prentice, (JFRC Fall ’10, BA ’12), is a JFRC Alumni Board member who recounts, "One of my favorite moments at the John Felice Rome Center was during a school trip to Tuscany. Dr. Cavallo supervised the trip, and she did a fantastic job of making sure everyone was having fun. She has the unique ability to bring people together. From sampling wine to singing Italian karaoke at dinner—this trip will always be one of my most cherished memories.”

Dr. Cavallo will be taking a sabbatical from her work to spend time with family as well as cultivating her interest in keyboarding and composition by studying digital composition in New York. In fall 2015, she’ll return to Chicago and continue her tenure at Loyola.

“My job in Rome has been about loving the students—loving the city, loving the work...”
