Liebentritt Faculty Development Opportunity for Lecturers (NTT 85-line faculty only)

Lecturers are vital to the teaching mission of the College. As part of their faculty development, they may apply for a course reduction in a given semester in order to develop a new course or program beyond what would normally be expected from a Lecturer.

The one-page application should be made to the Chair and describe a teaching and/or programmatic initiative that contributes to interdisciplinary teaching and/or makes a unique contribution to the CAS curriculum. The application should clarify how these endeavors will be fostered by a course release. The Chair endorses the application and sends it on to the Dean for final consideration. Applications must be made by December 1 for the following academic year. The course reduction comes with up to $1,000-$1500 in funding to help defray costs in connection with the course development. The course reduction may also come on top of a 4/3 teaching load the Lecturer may already have. This opportunity is made possible through the generosity of Don Liebentritt, CAS Alumnus in Political Science (1972).
