Message from the Dean

The opportunity to attend Loyola University Chicago is one many alumni value. I often hear comments from graduates, both recent and from years past, which affirms the quality of the Loyola experience—a life-long benefit. The University and School of Education remain committed to providing that opportunity to as many qualified students as possible. Honoring that commitment means providing scholarship opportunities and tuition discounts to those students who, without that support, could not attend Loyola.

To that end, over the past five to six years the School of Education has worked diligently to build our base of financial support for education majors, and thanks to the generosity of many of you, we have substantially expanded our ability to offer scholarships to students. Six years ago, the School of Education offered only a few scholarships. Today, we have built that number to over twenty, and the School also funds thirty graduate assistantships.

The university and its respective schools and colleges is undertaking a scholarship campaign that will allow for a significant increase in endowed scholarships for both undergraduate and graduate education majors. The initiative will include a major matching commitment from the University. We are excited about the possibilities this campaign presents, and with your continuing support we will be able to expand the availability of student scholarships. All of us (faculty, students, and staff) are grateful for the support our education alums provide.

Highlights from the Spring 2011 Reception

New and familiar faces attended the April 27 Alumni Reception hosted by Dean David Prasse. These bi-annual events are excellent opportunities for alumni to network and reminisce with faculty, staff and students. We look forward to seeing you and welcoming our new alumni at the October 15th Alumni Reception.

Research Methodology Faculty Scholarship

Terri Pigott, PhD, sees her role as a research methodologist as finding methodological and statistical solutions to problems faced by researchers in the field. Her specific research focuses on the development and dissemination of methods for meta-analysis, a statistical technique for synthesizing the results of multiple studies. Meta-analysis is commonly used in medicine, one example being the study on the effectiveness of mammography screening to detect breast cancer. In education and the social sciences, researchers use meta-analysis to understand the breadth of evidence about a particular intervention in order to make informed policy and practice decisions. The sheer number of research studies conducted all over the world makes it difficult for practitioners and policymakers to keep up to date on current research, and to find research-based solutions to educational and social problems.

In the face of overwhelming amounts of evidence, policymakers turn to a single study to support a decision. Dr. Pigott has worked on issues related to missing data problems, statistical power, and the inclusion of complex studies into a meta-analysis. Comprehensive research reviews and meta-analysis are tools that synthesize all the evidence in a given area using transparent and systematic methods. Given that all social interventions may perform differently depending on the setting and the research methods used, meta-analysis allows a disciplined examination of how the outcomes of an intervention may vary as a result of differences in the research design and setting. Thus, instead of using a single study as the basis of a policy decision, a meta-analysis can provide a more nuanced understanding of how the outcomes of an intervention might differ across settings, and can lead to better decisions about how to address a given educational or social problem.

Graduation 2011

On Thursday, May 12, over 300 SOE students received their degree. Daniel Biga (BSEd ’11) was the student speaker and Terry Mazany, President and CEO, Chicago Community Trust gave the commencement address. Mazany characterized our graduates’ mission of professionalism in service of social justice when he said, “Borrowing the title of a Cooper Edens children’s book, you are about to become the Caretakers of Wonder for our community’s welfare, hopes, and dreams. Individually and collectively you are forces for good.”
School of Education launches new programs

The School has several new, advanced level programs beginning in fall 2011 and through 2012.

- English-as-a Second Language Endorsement/Approval: Developed to address the needs of our growing English Language Learners (ELL) school population, this program offers the 18 hours of specific courses to meet the qualifications for an ESL approval on an early childhood, elementary, secondary, or special education teaching certificate. (Fall 2011)

- Master of Education degree (MEd) in International Higher Education. The program is designed for students who want to pursue leadership, policy analysis and student affairs professional opportunities in colleges and universities around the globe. This program provides students the opportunity to deepen their understanding of educational institutions in an era of globalization and the increasing importance of study abroad and international student mobility. The program is delivered as an online “global cohort” format accessible to students anywhere in the world. Students will have an opportunity for face-to-face contact at Loyola’s overseas centers (China, Vietnam, and Rome). (Fall 2012)

- Master of Education degree (MEd) in Organization Evaluation. This program prepares students for roles as evaluators and change agents in a range of organizations such as schools and school districts, non-profit agencies, and businesses. The program consists of courses from both the School of Education, and the Graduate School of Business. This program replaces the current master’s degree in Research Methodology. (Fall 2012)

- Educational Specialist degree (EdS) in Clinical Mental Health Counseling and a Dual Degree (5-Year Program) BS Chemistry and MEd Secondary Education are in the final stages of the approval process. (Fall 2012)

- English-as-a Second Language endorsement/Approval Development

Joy is Reading Conference

This annual event was attended by over 100 students and their parents. In addition to the sessions that focused on reading, the Jesse White Tumblers opened the conference with a spectacular performance. Jesse White, Illinois Secretary of State, spent several minutes speaking to the students and encouraging them to do well and stay in school.

Joy is Reading Conference

Dean Prasse bids farewell to Dr. Erwin Epstein who retired after a 45-year career of dedication and commitment to the academy with his last 12 years at Loyola University Chicago.

School of Education’s inaugural Distinguished Faculty Award for Excellence in Teaching was presented to Dr. Noah Sobe, Associate Professor, Cultural and Education Policy Studies. The full citation is at blogs.luc.edu/education.

Research Symposium • April 2, 2011

At the 13th Annual Community of Scholars Research Symposium, fifty School of Education students presented research on a range of topics covering local, national and international issues in education. Several faculty presented with their students and many more attended. Elaine Allensworth’s, PhD, from the University of Chicago gave the keynote. In her address, she presented research that the Consortium on Chicago School Research conducts in the Chicago Public Schools. The event was attended by 120 faculty, students, staff, and alumni. The Student Development Committee hosted this event.

What a difference a scholarship can make!

Loyola is committed to making a high-quality education affordable. Thanks to generous alumni and donors, the School of Education is able to award 25 scholarships for the 2011–2012 academic year.

“As a student, it means having less worry about the burden of paying back student loans in a challenging economy and uncertain job market. As a future educator, I will be able to accept a position thinking more about the students I will serve and less about the obligation of paying back loans.” — Michael Godinez, Freshman Mooney Scholarship recipient

Scholarships can make the difference in whether a student not only attends college, but also whether the student remains in college.

“I feel honored to have been chosen to receive the Mooney Scholarship. This scholarship does not only mean financial possibility to complete my final year in the School of Education at Loyola University, but it also upholds my journey to becoming a teacher. By receiving the Mooney Scholarship I feel supported and encouraged to continue working towards becoming an educator and an advocate for social justice.” — Naomi Stephanie Titean, Senior Mooney Scholarship recipient

“Thanks to the scholarship I am able to give back to the community and make my dreams come true. I serve as an example to my students that against all odds anything is possible with perseverance and wholehearted devotion.” — Angela Henderson (BEd ’10), first recipient of the Anna Lowe Scholarship and first grade teacher at International Charter School in Chicago.

“The Mooney Scholarship has provided me an opportunity to revision my role as Catholic educator and how the musical arts, social justice, and education will evolve to further the teachings of Christ and His Church…[and] has given me a renewed vigor to follow the more important teachings of Saint Theodore Guerin, ‘Love the children first, then teach them.” — Jordan Chua, Doctoral Student, Mooney Scholarship Recipient
