Message from the Dean

Developing and maintaining strong partnerships with public and private schools has been a significant component of the School of Education’s work since its beginning. As this school year begins we are excited to continue that legacy. Two new collaborations are highlighted in this issue. As one of four approved providers chosen by the Chicago Public Schools to be part of the Chicago Leadership Collaborative, the SOE’s newly designed principal preparation program begins this fall preparing principals for CPS. The initiative is unique in its collaborative approach.

Also this fall, Loyola University and the School of Education begin a collaborative partnership with Senn High School. Senn and Loyola will work closely together to advance Senn’s goal of developing a quality neighborhood school, anchored by an approved International Baccalaureate (IB) program.

Supported by another major federal grant ($2 million) the Chicagoland Partners for English Language Learners (CPELL) will work with seven suburban school districts to further develop teachers’ knowledge and skills in education English Language Learners. Participating teachers may enroll in a master’s program or seek an ESL endorsement. The first master’s cohort begins Fall 2012 at the Cuneo Mansion and Gardens campus in Vernon Hills.

Finally, this issue of the Newsletter recognizes our donors from the past year. I want to thank each of you for your continuing support of the School of Education, its students, faculty, and staff. Each year we manage to expand student support for scholarships and assistantships. It is your generosity that makes that possible. We thank you.

Alumni reception highlights

Faculty, staff, alumni and students gathered to share stories and reconnect at the Spring Alumni Reception. December 2011 graduates were welcomed as new alums and had the opportunity to network, make new friends, and greet Dr. John Wozniak, founding Dean of the SOE.

FOCUS ON RESEARCH

The school psychologist as agent of social justice

As a practicing school psychologist, Associate Professor David Shriberg always felt that his strength was in serving as a mediator, facilitator, and problem-solver when students, families, educators, and/or community members were in conflict. Neither teacher nor administrator and often with direct access to the underbelly of schools, he feels school psychologists are in a unique and powerful position to utilize their psychological training towards being an agent of social justice. As such, since his arrival at Loyola in Fall 2006, he has been drawn to projects that involve working with multiple stakeholders towards a shared vision of socially just outcomes.

Believing that research is something that should be done with people and not to people, Dr. Shriberg’s preferred methodology is action research. A central premise of action research is that the persons who would be most affected by any research plan or intervention should have the greatest say in how that plan or intervention is developed and assessed. Typically, this involves asking children, adolescents, and others whose voices are often not heard or respected what they think. This data is utilized towards working collaboratively with representative teams to develop and analyze measurable and sustainable changes in structures or interventions that reflect participant voice. In this way, research serves community needs first.

Over the past six and a half years, Dr. Shriberg and the thirteen students on his research team have facilitated several multi-year action research projects at numerous elementary, middle, and high schools across Chicagoland. Currently, this team is involved in several projects, including an action research project at a middle school focused on combating bullying, a project (co-led by Counseling Psychology faculty member Elizabeth Vera) focused on reducing the dropout rate at an area high school, and a program evaluation project measuring the effectiveness of a neighborhood tutoring program that partners with multiple schools in CPS. Additionally, after the results of student-led focus groups with Loyola school psychology graduate students indicated that service learning was their most impactful social justice learning experience, Dr. Shriberg (along with several graduate students) created and now teaches an “Introduction to Social Justice” course that has service learning as the core class assignment. This is a required course for all first year school psychology graduate students at Loyola. For the past three years, Dr. Shriberg and his research team have been examining the role of service learning experiences in facilitating Loyola students’ growth as agents of social justice.

Believing that social justice is a verb, Dr. Shriberg also has been instrumental at the national level in pushing the field of school psychology to go beyond slogans when it comes to social justice. He is the founder of the National Association of School Psychologists’ Social Justice Interest Group and the lead author of the only two empirical articles that have examined social justice from a school psychology perspective. Similarly, he is the lead editor of “School Psychology and Social Justice: Conceptual Foundations and Tools for Practice,” (Shriberg, Song, Miranda, & Radliff, in press), the first book on school psychology and social justice. This book will be published by Routledge in December 2012. Dr. Shriberg also will be a featured speaker on social justice and school psychology at the National Association of School Psychologists’ national convention in Seattle in February 2013.

FACULTY NEWS

School of Education faculty news

Jennifer Grant-Haworth, PhD retires

The School of Education faculty and staff bid Jennifer Haworth farewell as she retired after 18 years of dedicated and accomplished service to Loyola. During her tenure at Loyola she directed the Higher Education Program, served as Vice President for Mission and as the Executive Director of EVOKE. A devoted teacher, generous with her time and support, Dean Prasse said, “Thank you for what you have given us, Loyola, your students, and our community. We are richer in soul and spirit from your gifts.”

Faculty awards

Ann Marie Ryan, PhD received the SOE Distinguished Faculty Teaching Award.

Dr. Ryan received her PhD in Curriculum & Instruction from the University of Illinois at Chicago in 2004 and began Loyola in the same year. She was promoted to Associate Professor in 2010. Dr. Ryan teaches courses in the undergraduate and graduate programs that include History of American Education, Secondary Social Studies methods, Foundations of Curriculum & Instruction, Curriculum Theory, School Improvement and Curriculum Reform, Teaching and Learning in Urban Communities, Instructional Methods for Diverse Populations, and Documentary Research Methods. Dr. Ryan’s teaching excellence is evident in her course evaluations, mentoring she provides to students and alumni, and the letters of support she received from current and past students.

Steven Brown, PhD received the SOE Distinguished Faculty Research Award. Dr. Brown received his PhD from the University of California, Santa Barbara and joined the faculty in 1984. Dr. Brown’s excellence as a scholar is recognized as a result of his contributions to the field in Social Cognitive Career Theory (SCCT), developed in collaboration with Drs. Robert Lent and Gail Hackett. Dr. Brown has received several national awards for his scholarship, including the John Holland Award for Outstanding Contributions to Vocational and Personality Psychology Research (1995), the Best Science Award for lifetime contributions to counseling psychology research by the Society for Counseling Psychology (2008), and the Distinguished Contributions award for life-time contributions to vocational psychology research (2010). The impact of his research is recognized internationally.
Senn High School partnership

On May 23, Mayor Rahm Emanuel, alongside Rev. Michael J. Garanzini, SJ, announced a partnership between Loyola University Chicago and Senn High School. Loyola will work collaboratively with the administration and faculty of Senn to develop a high quality, International Baccalaureate (IB) program for the geographic community served by Senn. The faculty of Loyola’s School of Education will work with the school principal, administrative team, and staff to help support the academic achievement of the students at Senn High School. “As the specific and broad-based needs of Senn High School become clear, potential areas of the university involvement will emerge” stated David Prasse, Ph.D., Dean of Loyola’s School of Education. “Existing opportunities for Loyola’s involvement beyond the School of Education might include the School of Social Work, the Department of Fine and Performing Arts, Computer Science and Instructional Technologies, and the School of Nursing. Each of these units holds expertise that represents a University wide potential contribution to this partnership.”

Weekend of Excellence

Participation and attendance at the 14th annual symposium surpassed previous years with 150 attendees. There were 75 student and 11 faculty presenters. Hosted in conjunction with the University’s Weekend of Excellence, the event provided an excellent opportunity for our students and faculty to showcase their research to the larger university community. In attendance were African American high school juniors and seniors from the Kappa Leadership Institute who joined Dr. Marlon James (SOE faculty) in a research presentation. As one faculty remarked, “Lots of great research presented. I loved hearing from the young men at Kappa.”

During the event, Associate Dean Janet Pierce-Ritter (PhD ’03), announced the first recipient of the Student Development Research Grant: Marcus Budiraharjo, EdD candidate in Curriculum & Instruction. The grant provides a doctoral student with $1000 to support their research.

CPS Chicago Leadership Collaborative (CLC)

The School of Education is one of four institutions chosen to prepare Chicago Public School principals as part of the CPS Chicago Leadership Collaborative. The SOE was selected due to the successful track record in developing principal leaders, rigorous systems to recruit and select high potential candidates, and the programs’ alignment to the new CPS competencies for principals. The SOE’s unique program is designed to build leadership capacity among the CPS assistant principal population. CPS assistant principals accepted into the program will become a Loyola Leadership Doctoral Fellow, earn their doctorate degree in education and superintendent endorsement. A Loyola Leadership Doctoral Fellow is a member of a highly selective and diverse cohort of current CPS assistant principals with a common purpose of transforming schools to achieve improved Pk-12 student outcomes.
Several School Psychology graduates have been elected as 2012-2013 officers for the Illinois School Psychologist Association. Jim Wilczynski (PhD ’04) President-Elect, and Patrick Abraham (BA ’99, MEd ’00, EdS ’02) and Jessica Herrman (MEd ’04, EdS ’06) Regional Directors. Richard Harley (MEd ’86, PhD ’03) assumes the role of President.

Ryan Williams (PhD ’12) begins his college teaching career this fall at the University of Memphis in a tenure-track faculty position.

José Cossa (PhD ’08) was presented with the Joyce Cain Award for Exceptional Research at the 2012 Comparative and International Education Society (CIES) Conference.

Art Munin (PhD ’08) received Loyola’s Higher Education 2012 Distinguished Alumnus Award for his outstanding contribution through scholarship and service to the greater higher education community.

Lisa Caputo Love (BSEd ’99, MEd ’08) Program Director at Saturday Place, Morgan Sullivan Head Teacher and Nicole Reese (current MEd student) use evidence-based data and implement strategies with positive outcomes for the 3rd and 4th grade students at Saturday Place.

> For more information about Saturday place go to www.saturdayplace.org

Sara Golomb (PhD ’10) completed her first year as an Assistant Professor in the Psychology Department at University of Detroit Mercy.

Pawel Brozyniak, SJ (MEd ’11) has been assigned to be the President of the first Jesuit High School in Poland. It is the first time the Jesuits have assumed leadership of a public school.

Hicks wins Damen Award

Mary Hicks (MEd ‘99) received the 2012 Damen Award for the School of Education at the Founders Dinner. Mary spent 15 years managing operations for small, entrepreneurial businesses before changing careers and joining the education field. She taught for four years in Chicago public charter schools before she became the program director at the Rochelle Lee Fund—now known as Boundless Readers—a not-for-profit organization that is the leading provider of literacy-based professional development resources and programs to Chicago Public Schools. Congratulations Mary!

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

Scholarship support makes a big impact!

SCHOLARSHIP SUPPORT IS VITAL TO THE SUCCESS OF LOYOLA UNIVERSITY CHICAGO NOW AND INTO THE FUTURE.

In 2003, the School of Education had only one endowed scholarship—The Alice Nihill Scholarship Fund—and was able to award $1,800 to a deserving education student. Today, thanks to the support of our alumni and friends, the School of Education is able to award seven endowed scholarships and over $139,000 in aid to help keep the cost of education affordable for the current generation of future educators. To demonstrate its commitment to scholarship, the University is embarking on an $80 million campaign, Access to Excellence: The Campaign for Scholarship. During the campaign gifts of $500 or more to an endowed scholarship will be matched dollar for dollar by the University. Through this initiative the School of Education will be able to award more scholarship assistance than ever before. This will increase our ability to continue to attract the best and brightest student.

I was unsure of which college to choose, but after learning that I had been awarded the Mooney Scholarship, my decision was made. I am able to attend the school I really wanted to go to, Loyola. I am thankful because the Mooney Scholarship will help me focus less on financial need and more on becoming a better teacher.

HANNAH REIMAN
2012 Freshman
4-Year Mooney Scholarship Recipient & Golden Apple Scholar

I am incredibly honored to have received the Career Transition Scholarship and to have the opportunity to join Loyola’s School of Education. Receiving the scholarship helped to renew my faith and taught me that anything is possible if you utilize resources and never give up, because without it I never would have been able to enroll at Loyola.

EMILY MEYER
Masters Student
Career Transition Scholarship Recipient

Words cannot sufficiently express my thankfulness. I know that without the generosity of alumni donors, I would have difficulties funding my graduate experience. I definitely will use this scholarship to become a better teacher, working to equitably teach all of our youth and prepare specifically our urban youth for success in our society.

COREY WINCHESTER
Masters Student
Mooney Fellowship Recipient

Receiving the Anna Lowe Scholarship is such an honor. Being awarded this scholarship is helping me fulfill my goals at Loyola in the School of Education. It not only lets me know I am doing well at Loyola, something to be very proud of, it also shows me that my efforts have be recognized by the Loyola community. It shows me that Loyola believes in me.
