Loyola University Fellow

Organization Overview
Allowance for Good is an Evanston-based social purpose and philanthropic venture. Our mission is to develop the rising generations of philanthropic leaders who cultivate global citizenship and empower others around the world to achieve their full potential.

Learning Objective
As a result of serving as a fellow with Allowance for Good, I will be able to develop and lead a new train-the-trainer student model at Loyola that delivers curriculum in philanthropy, civic engagement, and global citizenship to students at a partner high school.

Fellow Description
Allowance for Good seeks one individual who is interested in supporting the organization in a voluntary fellowship role.

Tasks for this fellowship will be varied in nature but will generally include:

Campus Partnerships Model Support

- Work with AfG program director to create an implementation plan for the AfG model at Loyola University
- Meet with relevant university staff, students, and partners to implement model during the 2015-2016 school year
- Create recruitment materials and presentations
- Deliver presentations at relevant student groups, classes, and certificate programs
- Advertise student opportunities via social media

Curriculum Development

- Research train-the-trainer model curriculums from other programmatic models
- Work with the AfG program director to create a train-the-trainer curriculum from existing AfG curriculum materials
- Pilot the train-the-trainer curriculum with AfG Loyola group
Please note that this is an unpaid opportunity; however, if invited, you have the potential to make a huge difference in the endeavors of Allowance for Good.

If chosen for this role, you will work closely with Elizabeth Newton, founder and executive director of the organization, and Karin Scott, program director.

Commitment: This role will include a 10-15 hours a week time commitment, with at least 8 hours served at the Allowance for Good office: 990 Grove Street, Suite 407, Evanston, IL  60201.

Qualifications
This position requires a self-starter with excellent skills in project management, communication (both via email and in Allowance for Good written materials), and creativity. Strong attention to detail is essential. The ideal candidate possesses the initiative and confidence to work independently, but also the ability to function as part of the Allowance for Good team.

Background and/or interest in grant writing, development, philanthropy, and the social sector strongly preferred. High energy level, enthusiasm, sense of humor, and flexibility absolutely required.

How To Apply
Submit your resume and cover letter to karin@allowanceforgood.org as soon as possible and no later than August 15th, 2015. Address your cover letter to Karin Scott.

Thank you for considering this fellowship opportunity with Allowance for Good!
