PROLAW – MASTER’S IN RULE OF LAW FOR DEVELOPMENT

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

PROLAW expands program offerings
Loyola University Chicago has expanded the School of Law’s Rule of Law for Development (PROLAW) program which will now include a one-year practice-oriented master’s degree program for non-lawyers. PROLAW’s Master of Jurisprudence (MJ) in Rule of Law for Development (MJ/LLM) will allow students to gain experience in conflict countries around the world. In addition, the MJ program will now be offered in its second academic year; students for the 2017-18 year can now apply called Jobbik Borsas and Mediterr, a pioneering course on Video and New Media Production in the Rule of Law Capstone Project course.

PROLAW’s Class of 2017 has officially begun their spring semester! Click here to meet the 22 PROLAW students originating from 20 countries.

We send our heartfelt appreciation to these and the many other generous PROLAW supporters.

Joseph A. Power Jr., a Loyola alumnus, a founding attorney of Power, Rogers & Smith and a member of the PROLAW Advisory Board, has recently donated an additional $100,000 towards his pledge of a total scholarship fund of $250,000 over the next few years.

AT&T has awarded PROLAW funds towards a PROLAW Mexico scholarship for the second year in a row.

We are now accepting applications for September 2017 for both the LLM and MJ programs. Click here for more details on both programs.

Read exciting alumni updates from a few of our distinguished PROLAW alumni.

Visit our WEBSITE and view our VIDEO.

Join us on FACEBOOK and view our VIDEO.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

New PROLAW courses
Loyola University Chicago’s School of Law has signed a cooperation agreement with UNIDROIT, a Rome-based intergovernmental organization focused on harmonization of private international law. The agreement covers the implementation of a joint research/internship program in the field of uniform law. PROLAW graduate, Mohamed Abdulrahim, initiated the cooperation this summer when he carried out an internship doing research on the topic “Applying Civil Law in an Effort to Eradicate Corruption in Egypt”.

Recent financial support
PROLAW Advisory Board member Barry McCall has made a new gift of $60,000 to Loyola for general PROLAW support, bringing the total of his personal contribution to over $1,000,000.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

We are now accepting applications for September 2017 for both the LLM and MJ programs. Click here for more details on both programs.

Visit our WEBSITE and view our VIDEO.

Join us on FACEBOOK and view our VIDEO.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

New PROLAW courses
Loyola University Chicago’s School of Law has signed a cooperation agreement with UNIDROIT, a Rome-based intergovernmental organization focused on harmonization of private international law. The agreement covers the implementation of a joint research/internship program in the field of uniform law. PROLAW graduate, Mohamed Abdulrahim, initiated the cooperation this summer when he carried out an internship doing research on the topic “Applying Civil Law in an Effort to Eradicate Corruption in Egypt”.

Recent financial support
PROLAW Advisory Board member Barry McCall has made a new gift of $60,000 to Loyola for general PROLAW support, bringing the total of his personal contribution to over $1,000,000.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

We are now accepting applications for September 2017 for both the LLM and MJ programs. Click here for more details on both programs.

Visit our WEBSITE and view our VIDEO.

Join us on FACEBOOK and view our VIDEO.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

New PROLAW courses
Loyola University Chicago’s School of Law has signed a cooperation agreement with UNIDROIT, a Rome-based intergovernmental organization focused on harmonization of private international law. The agreement covers the implementation of a joint research/internship program in the field of uniform law. PROLAW graduate, Mohamed Abdulrahim, initiated the cooperation this summer when he carried out an internship doing research on the topic “Applying Civil Law in an Effort to Eradicate Corruption in Egypt”.

Recent financial support
PROLAW Advisory Board member Barry McCall has made a new gift of $60,000 to Loyola for general PROLAW support, bringing the total of his personal contribution to over $1,000,000.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

We are now accepting applications for September 2017 for both the LLM and MJ programs. Click here for more details on both programs.

Visit our WEBSITE and view our VIDEO.

Join us on FACEBOOK and view our VIDEO.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

New PROLAW courses
Loyola University Chicago’s School of Law has signed a cooperation agreement with UNIDROIT, a Rome-based intergovernmental organization focused on harmonization of private international law. The agreement covers the implementation of a joint research/internship program in the field of uniform law. PROLAW graduate, Mohamed Abdulrahim, initiated the cooperation this summer when he carried out an internship doing research on the topic “Applying Civil Law in an Effort to Eradicate Corruption in Egypt”.

Recent financial support
PROLAW Advisory Board member Barry McCall has made a new gift of $60,000 to Loyola for general PROLAW support, bringing the total of his personal contribution to over $1,000,000.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

We are now accepting applications for September 2017 for both the LLM and MJ programs. Click here for more details on both programs.

Visit our WEBSITE and view our VIDEO.

Join us on FACEBOOK and view our VIDEO.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

New PROLAW courses
Loyola University Chicago’s School of Law has signed a cooperation agreement with UNIDROIT, a Rome-based intergovernmental organization focused on harmonization of private international law. The agreement covers the implementation of a joint research/internship program in the field of uniform law. PROLAW graduate, Mohamed Abdulrahim, initiated the cooperation this summer when he carried out an internship doing research on the topic “Applying Civil Law in an Effort to Eradicate Corruption in Egypt”.

Recent financial support
PROLAW Advisory Board member Barry McCall has made a new gift of $60,000 to Loyola for general PROLAW support, bringing the total of his personal contribution to over $1,000,000.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

We are now accepting applications for September 2017 for both the LLM and MJ programs. Click here for more details on both programs.

Visit our WEBSITE and view our VIDEO.

Join us on FACEBOOK and view our VIDEO.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

New PROLAW courses
Loyola University Chicago’s School of Law has signed a cooperation agreement with UNIDROIT, a Rome-based intergovernmental organization focused on harmonization of private international law. The agreement covers the implementation of a joint research/internship program in the field of uniform law. PROLAW graduate, Mohamed Abdulrahim, initiated the cooperation this summer when he carried out an internship doing research on the topic “Applying Civil Law in an Effort to Eradicate Corruption in Egypt”.

Recent financial support
PROLAW Advisory Board member Barry McCall has made a new gift of $60,000 to Loyola for general PROLAW support, bringing the total of his personal contribution to over $1,000,000.

PROLAW is a graduate degree program in Rule of Law for Development offered at Loyola University Chicago’s campus in Rome, Italy. This unique one-year program prepares students to become qualified and effective governance and rule of law advisors, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to catalyze and manage legal and institutional change. Further details on the current LLM program can be found in our ‘Find Us On File’ section.

We are now accepting applications for September 2017 for both the LLM and MJ programs. Click here for more details on both programs.

Visit our WEBSITE and view our VIDEO.

Join us on FACEBOOK and view our VIDEO.