Citation Links:

Learning how to cite your papers in MLA, APA, Chicago, or Turabian style can help prevent plagiarism and provide you with the skills you need to successfully present research projects in the workplace and perhaps one day publish articles and books of your own. Consult the following websites and citation generators in order to create a flawless works cited page that will put the perfect finish to your paper and boost your grade!

1. Purdue Owl: https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/. Hosted by Purdue University, this official website contains tips on writing, research, samples of successful papers, and provides a helpful citation chart that can be downloaded onto your computer.

2. EasyBib: http://content.easybib.com/. Run by Scholar Space, this useful website contains multiple citation guides to citing sources from journals and books, to newspapers and magazines.

3. BibMe: http://www.bibme.org/. Based on the most current citation books for APA, MLA, and Chicago citation, BibMe helps you craft and generate citations.

4. Citation Machine: http://www.citationmachine.net/. This citation machine generates citations in MLA, APA, Chicago, Turabian, and Harvard, but it is up to you to fill in some of the details (author, chapter title, etc.) before the citation is generated.

6. APA Style: http://www.apastyle.org/. For the psychologists and behavioral scientists out there, the American Psychological Association maintains this handy website, which provides exhaustive examples of how to cite correctly using APA.

8. Loyola Writing Center: http://www.luc.edu/writing/student_resources.shtml. Remember to consult the LUC Writing Center page on Loyola University Chicago’s website. There you’ll find links to multiple citation and formatting guides.

Happy Citing!