

Islam and Christianity: Commonalities

Yasmin A Ranney, Loyola University Chicago School of Education

With the belief that theological and spiritual renewal can prepare us for social renewal, we continue to strive for the achievement of a wider vision of our world community as interracial, intercultural, and international. This presentation provides a multi-layered examination of the intersection of Christianity and Islam from a variety of perspectives. First, the socio-political tensions in theology and dialogue faced by Christians and Muslims as they live and work together will be addressed, with a focus on the following specific areas: revelation, interreligious attitudes, faith, science, technology, and the future of humanity, as Christian mission and Islamic da'wah (the Call to Allah). The spirit of living in dialogue also requires listening to God and listening to one another. It requires our attention to education, family, worship, and sociopolitical issues. This presentation will be augmented with the popular views espoused by Christians and Muslims as they relate their spiritual lives to the call for social justice, brotherhood, and human dignity.
