Administrative History

In 1975 Carol Frances Jegen, in a letter to Rogelio Manrique at the South Bend Comision Catolica, explained the beginnings of the Hispanic Institute. She wrote "my ideas...for the future of an Instituto Hispano at Mundelein College come from the hopes and visions of an Institute which Sister Terese Avila and I began to share several years before Sister died. ...Our purpose was quite clear-to find ways for Mundelein to be of genuine service to the Hispanic Community...From the beginning our ideas focused on language, culture and the religious education components of such an Instituto." Later in the letter she says that the Instituto could include full courses, workshops and mini courses.

The Hispanic Institute of Mundelein College began as a cooperative program sponsored by the pastoral ministry component of the Religious Studies Department, the bilingual bicultural program of the Education Department and the Spanish Department of the Modern Language Division. In 1976 a six week summer program with experienced faculty began. The weekly themes were: Culture and Ministry, Ministry to Hispanic Youth in the US, Ecclesial Communities-Models, Sacramental Renewal, Historical Perspectives of Latin America, and Theology of Liberation.

Carol Frances Jegen, as director of the Religious Studies Department, also directed and coordinated the Hispanic Institute. Funding for a director or coordinator of the Institute was usually very limited. There were periods when a director/coordinator was employed. Rosilinda Ramirez was the director from 1978-1979 and Ken Ortega from 1986-1989. The Hispanic Institute faced two major challenges: funding to keep tuition low and structural-social integration with Mundelein College. It was clear to many that Hispanics should be involved in the program planning so a strong grass roots participation was sought. After consultation with those who ministered and those who participated in the program the Comite del Pueblo was formed. Members of this committee helped organize the entire program. In its own way the Comite del Pueblo was a school of leadership, providing experience for several who were later appointed as diocesan Hispanic leaders.

A major concern in planning was to link non-credit courses with higher level studies. This led to the creation of a Pastoral Competency Program (Certificado de Capacitacion Pastoral) as a way to help ministers progress from elementary formation to programs of higher studies. Toward the end of the 1980s Father William Conway of the Diocese of Joliet connected his diocesan Hispanic work with the Institute to create a full training program.

Evidence of the Hispanic Institute's contribution to the Church and to the community is seen in the work of graduates. Sister Dominga Zapata is consultant for the Hispanic Ministries of the Chicago Archdiocese and was former director of the Midwest Hispanic Catholic Conference; Deacon Enrique Alonso is the Archdiocesan Coordinator of the Hispanic Diaconate; Deacon Virgilio Bonifazi is the Director of the Office of Catechetics for the Archdiocese; and Mrs. Angelina Marquez was formerly director of the Office for Hispanic Ministry in Chicago.

In 1992 in a Proposal from the Institute for Pastoral Studies a brief history of the Hispanic Institute is given, The memo pointed out the service of the Institute to the Archdiocese of Chicago with its combination of pastoral activity and emphasis on scholarship. A Hispanic population of 50% in Chicago is anticipated by 2010.

Scope and Content

The papers of the Hispanic Institute of Mundelein College span the years 1974-2003 and documents the beginning of the Institute to the Mundelein-Loyola affiliation through the period of integration with Loyola's Institute of Pastoral Studies. Under the direction of William Spine, S.J., the program grew to foster interest and planning for education for pastoral ministry of Spanish speaking Catholics begun early in the 1960s and 1970s. The papers show the leadership of Mundelein College and Carol Frances Jegen, BVM as both director and coordinator in developing educational courses and in working with other similar interest groups and agencies to provide necessary and essential pastoral ministry education. The papers include materials such as course offerings, minutes and agendas of meetings, financial reports, search for and grant proposals for financial support, correspondence and Hispanic Task Force Reports.

The material is arranged first by subject, then chronologically. Original provenance was maintained whenever possible. Spanish language documents, titles, and other material are not translated into English.
