Administrative History

In 1941, Ralph A. Gallagher, S.J., established the Institute of Human Resources and Industrial Relations (HRIR) under the name the Institute of Social Administration (ISA) with the goal of cultivating a graduate level program covering the field of labor-management relations. The program, the first of its kind in the Midwest, equips its students with economic, social, and political theories, as well as practical knowledge and experience in the field. Since its inception, HRIR has included a Board of Advisors comprised of labor relations professionals from the Chicago area in addition to a faculty having professional experience in positions dealing with labor relations. In 1950, HRIR's name changed to the Institute of Social and Industrial Relations (ISIR), and in 1965 the name changed again, this time to the Institute of Industrial Relations (IIR). This name held for almost 30 years until the university renamed HRIR in 1991 to the Institute of Human Resources and Industrial Relations. Currently, the Institute is known as the Institute of Human Resources and Employment Relations.

Fr. Gallagher, S.J., served as the Institute's first director until his death in 1965, at which time Julius Rezler, Ph.D., succeeded him. In 1969 Alan Fredian, Ph.D., became the director of the institute. In the 1990s, Arthur Dobbelaere became HRIR director.

Scope and Content

The records of the Institute of Human Resources and Industrial Relations consist of 9.25 linear feet spanning the years 1940-1992, and includes correspondence; meeting minutes; annual reports; constitution and by-laws; course bulletins; course syllabi; conference materials; published articles; program brochures; news releases and other press; budget reports; grade distributions; and photographs. Subjects covered include HRIR faculty and administration; HRIR students; labor relations; the Bureau of National Affairs Briefing Sessions on Collective Bargaining seminars; the Loyola Manpower Conferences; HRIR's anniversaries; HRIR curriculum; nationwide labor programs; HRIR Board of Advisors; LISAIR (Loyola Institute of Social and Industrial Relations student group); student internships; and the 1982 exchange program with Ireland. A large portion of the records reflect the administration of Alan Fredian.
