Biographical Sketch

The Cuneo family is best known for the wealth, commercial enterprises, and philanthropic endeavors of John F. Cuneo, the founder of The Cuneo Press and owner of the mansion and ground that became the Cuneo Mansion and Gardens in Libertyville, Illinois. John F. Cuneo started his career as an owner of a book bindery but acquired his wealth through large scale purchasing and management of printing press operations across the United States. Cuneo expanded his business by purchasing a number of dairies in Illinois in addition to the presses he owned across the United States. In addition, Cuneo established a philanthropic organization, the Cuneo Foundation, to raise money and aid a variety of organizations. As devout Catholics, the Cuneo family was particularly devoted to aiding Catholic organizations.

John F. Cuneo was first married to Florence B. Hill in 1905, whom he later divorced in 1917. His second marriage was to Julia Shepherd Cuneo in 1930, with whom he had two children, John Jr. and Consuela. Cuneo's father, Frank Cuneo, was an esteemed Chicago businessman and president of Garibaldi and Cuneo, a produce firm, as well as an investor in Chicago real estate. Cuneo also had a brother, Americo F. Cuneo, to which this collection includes a scrapbook of his obituaries and letters of condolences upon his death in 1968. Their family's history in America is traced back to Cuneo's grandfather, John B. Cuneo, who came to the United States from Italy and started the family business as a local Chicago grocer.

The Cuneo Mansion in Libertyville, Illinois, formerly the estate of Samuel Insull, was purchased and refurbished by Cuneo in 1937. The mansion served as the family estate; it and the other extensive properties owned by Cuneo in the northwest suburbs served as sites where Cuneo dabbled in equestrian and agrarian interests. Cuneo eventually came to found Hawthorn Melody Farms and Hawthorn Melody Farms Dairy, where he raised cows, hogs, ponies, horses, poultry, and distributed dairy products. Ever the entrepreneur, Cuneo turned the farm and dairy into a tourist attraction complete with a zoo, where children and families could watch cows being milked, view and pet animals, and see firsthand what day to day agricultural processes were like. The dairy was reported to distribute 400,000 pounds of milk daily to the Chicagoland area. Towards the end of the late 1960s and early 1970s, as John Cuneo aged, parcels of the land were sold off, as well as the dairy operations. The estate, which was bequeathed to Cuneo's son, John Jr., was donated to Loyola University Chicago in December 2009. John Cuneo Sr. had indicated in his will that after the death of his wife, Julia, he wished for the mansion to be used for educational purposes.

Scope and Content

The Cuneo Family Papers consist of 35.01 linear feet spanning the years 1868-2000 and contains correspondence, photographs, books, reports, notes, brochures, publications, certificates, artifacts, greeting cards, postcards, meeting minutes, catalogs, newspaper clippings, programs, and scrapbooks.
