Biographical Sketch

Thomas Sheehan was born on June 25th, 1941 to an Irish father and an Italian mother, and was raised in San Francisco, California. He received his B.A. in from St. Patrick's College in Menlo Park, California (1963) and his M.A. (1968) and Ph.D. (1971) from Fordham University in New York, New York. Areas of academic study for Sheehan include Contemporary European Philosophy, Philosophy of History, Classical Metaphysics, Hermeneutics, Phenomenology, and the Philosophy of Religion. He particularly focuses upon German philosopher Martin Heidegger, of whom many of his lectures and publications are about.

Sheehan spent ten years in a Roman Catholic Seminary studying for the priesthood before being asked to leave, two years into graduate school, due to "theological radicalism and social activism" As an active proponent of the "God is Dead" movement, Sheehan's ideology would go on to cause notable tension within the Jesuit environment of Loyola University Chicago, where he taught in the Philosophy department from 1971 to 1999, splitting his time between the Chicago and Rome campuses. His 1986 book The First Coming, an analysis of the historical background of Jesus, explored the controversial viewpoint that Jesus was not in fact the son of God, but simply a prophet spreading God's word.

Throughout his academic career, Sheehan remained a political activist, working in protest of United States involvement in Southeast Asia, on behalf of Mexican farm workers in California, and also of political unrest in El Salvador. He currently holds a position as professor in the Department of Religious Studies at Stanford University. Upon his departure from Loyola in 1999, he was granted emeritus status.

Scope and Content

The Thomas Sheehan Papers comprise 12.18 linear feet spanning the years 1959-2001, with the bulk consisting of the years 1966-1999, and include publications, lecture notes, syllabi, correspondence, notes, syllabi, speeches, lectures, articles, translations, minutes, and audio tapes. Languages included in the collection are English, German, Italian and French. It is arranged chronologically, with the exception of portions of Series 3: Syllabi and Teaching Materials, of which parts are arranged alphabetically.

Series 1: Personal, 1959-1999, Boxes 1-3

This series includes school papers written during his secondary education, as well as class notes taken during this time. It also includes correspondence related to his trip to Nicaragua and a 1990 interview with Time Magazine.

Series 2: Loyola Correspondence, 1971-1990, Box 3

This series is comprised of correspondence written during and relating to Sheehan's time at Loyola.

Series 3: Syllabi and Teaching Materials, 1966-1999, Boxes 3-15

This series is comprised of syllabi and teaching notes relating to courses Sheehan taught. It is the only series which diverges from a chronological arrangement, as Sheehan's Loyola courses- the vast majority of which were Philosophy courses- are arranged alphabetically by department and then numerically by course number within each department. Any non-Loyola course materials in the series are arranged separately after the Loyola courses, and are arranged chronologically.

Series 4: Lectures, Conferences, and Debates, 1965-1997, Boxes 15-19

This series contains materials relating to lectures, conferences or debates Sheehan participated in. It includes handwritten notes for speeches, as well as copies of speeches and lectures and any supporting articles used.

Series 5: Publications, 1975-1999, Boxes 19-24

This series contains Sheehan's published articles, reviews and manuscripts, as well research notes and correspondence. Of particular note in this series is an ongoing epistolary exchange between Sheehan and French philosopher Jacques Derrida.

Subseries 5A: Translations, 1962-1999, Box 24

This subseries contains Sheehan's translations someone else's work from another language into English

Series 6: Audiovisual, 1984-1999, Boxes 25-27

This series is comprised of cassette and VHS tape recordings made by Sheehan. They include taped lectures, as well as some recorded debates and interviews, including a 1998 radio session with Studs Terkel.

Series 7: Restricted, Box 28-31

This series contains student and faculty records.

Subseries 7B: Academic Harassment, 1979-1996, Boxes 29-31

This series includes correspondence, minutes, and notes relating to an academic harassment controversy Sheehan was involved in during his time at Loyola University Chicago.
