Are you passionate about protecting the environment and creating a more just world? At Loyola University Chicago's School of Environmental Sustainability, you won't just learn about urgent environmental challenges—you'll gain the knowledge, experience, and skills to help solve them.

At the School of Environmental Sustainability, we offer:

- LEARN BY DOING Here, you might study ecology in the prairies and savannas of our Retreat and Ecology Campus, partner with faculty on air quality research, or design real-world solutions in our engaged learning courses. Grow fresh produce through our Urban Agriculture Program or convert waste into clean energy in our innovative Biodiesel Lab. Whatever your passion, you'll gain practical skills and make a tangible impact.
- INTERDISCIPLINARY BY DESIGN Environmental issues are complex, and solving them requires broad knowledge and integrated thinking. We give you a strong foundation in the scientific, societal, and ethical aspects of environmental problems. Our interdisciplinary programs allow you to explore diverse fields and prepare you for a variety of career paths.
- CAREER OPPORTUNITIES Our alumni thrive in business, nonprofits, public health, education, government, environmental consulting, and more. With real-world experience and practical job skills, you'll be well-positioned to launch a career that creates lasting change.
- ACCELERATED MASTER'S DEGREE Looking to take your education further? We offer combined bachelor's/master's programs that let you complete both degrees in just five years. You'll save time and tuition while gaining advanced training that gives you a competitive edge.
- A COMMUNITY WITH PURPOSE As Chicago's Jesuit, Catholic university, Loyola is deeply committed to caring for people and the planet. We embody this mission by nurturing students personally and professionally and by working for just solutions to environmental problems. Here, you'll be part of an inclusive, welcoming community united by a shared purpose: building a better future for all.
