FROM THE STUDENTS

"I chose Loyola's biomedical program based on its strong credentials in research, its friendly staff and deeply committed faculty, and its ability to blend graduate and medical students so that a translational approach to biomedicine can be fully appreciated."

— Derek Wainright, Alum

SCHOLARSHIP

Students accepted into the Integrated Program in the Biomedical Sciences PhD program receive a full tuition scholarship for 48 credit hours of coursework and are granted a stipend from the Graduate School.

WHAT MAKES US STAND OUT?

Our programs give students the unique opportunity to pursue both research and training. Loyola's Center for Translational Research and Education (CTRE), a state-of-the-art research facility at the heart of campus, creates a space where researchers and clinicians can come together.

Recent PhD graduates have gone on to careers at organizations such as Abb-Vie, Harvard University, Hospira, National Institute of Health, and Washington University, to name a few.
