

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY CHICAGO

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL

FOLLOW YOUR PASSION

Founded in 1926, and committed to addressing our world's most pressing social and environmental challenges, Loyola's Graduate School offers advanced study of the humanities, computational sciences, natural sciences, and social sciences.

When enrolling in one of our master's or PhD degree programs, you'll have opportunities to collaborate with more than 600 faculty. Through one-on-one mentoring, you'll advance and apply your knowledge in and out of the classroom through independent study, research, internships, consulting opportunities, and practicums.

WHAT MAKES US STAND OUT?

- Knowledge in the service of humanity, a Jesuit ideal, is the cornerstone of Loyola's academic programs.
- As a graduate, you'll join a network of more than 150,000 Loyola alumni, opening doors to future professional and social opportunities.
- A wide array of programs taught with leading-edge methodological approaches awarded for Excellence and Innovation in Graduate Education from the Midwest Association of Graduate Schools.
- Nationally ranked graduate programs in Clinical Psychology, English, History, Political Science, Psychology, and Sociology*.
- Loyola's Centers and Institutes of Excellence allow you to develop yourself professionally and build your research experience.

"The faculty foster a supportive and collaborative learning environment, which encourages students to play an active role in their education through peer learning. The result, for me, was a powerful combination in which my professors and classmates broadened my horizons, reinforced my knowledge, and strengthened my research abilities."

— Joelle Strom, MS, Applied Statistics
