Remembering Activist Phyllis Schlafly: Inscribing Conservatives in Women's History

*Special guest lecture by visiting scholar
Amélie Ribieras*

Wednesday, October 18, 2017
4:00 PM - 5:30 PM

Loyola University Chicago
Lake Shore Campus
Cuneo Hall, Room 116

In August 2016, Phyllis Schlafly, often referred to as the darling of the conservative movement, passed away. At a time when conservatism seems to be reinvigorated, it is crucial to reflect on the history of female conservatives and inscribe them on the history of American women. Ribieras will focus on questions dealing with image making, intention and manipulation in order to demonstrate how Phyllis Schlafly willfully wished to favor a militant memory of her own conservatism.

All students, faculty, and staff are welcome to attend.
