Adobe Creative Cloud

Due to licensing changes made by Adobe, Loyola users will need to sign in the Adobe Creative Cloud (CC) to use any Adobe applications (such as Acrobat, Photoshop, and InDesign). This change was instituted in the E-Classrooms and public access labs at the start of the Fall 2019 semester.

Starting on February 11th, all remaining computers managed by ITS (Information Technology Services) will be updated with the new Adobe CC Client. When an Adobe application is launched, the Adobe CC Client will prompt the user to enter their email address and select an account type. Then they will be redirected to Loyola’s Single Sign-on (SSO) page to enter their UVID and password. Once a user has signed in, Adobe applications will launch and function normally.

When prompted to Sign in to the Adobe Creative Cloud, enter your Loyola e-mail address and click Continue.

When prompted to Select an account, choose "Company or School Account". You will be redirected to the Loyola Single Sign-On (SSO) page.

Enter your Loyola UVID and password, then click LOGIN.
