CONTENTS

Editor’s Note
Meghan Funk

ARTICLES

A Prescription for the Future of Illinois’ Psychologists
Jean Yi Jinn Liu ................................................................. 1-15

Eliminating Scope of Practice Barriers for Illinois Physician Assistants
Jessica Wolf ................................................................. 16-27

The Nurse Will Be In Shortly: Expanding Access To Illinois’ Rural Areas Through Greater Nurse Practitioner Autonomy
Daniel J. Burns ......................................................... 28-38

Midwifery in Illinois: The Need for Independence
Jarel Curvey ................................................................. 39-50

Expanding the Scope of Midwifery Practice in Illinois: Feminist and Financial Arguments
Molly Ryder ................................................................. 51-65

Closing the Primary Care Gap: Is Pharmacist Prescriptive Authority the Answer?
Leighanne Root ................................................................. 66-78

The PPACA’s Impact on the Scope of Practice of Nurse Practitioners
Matt Brothers ................................................................. 79-89

Scope of Practice Constraints on Nurse Practitioners Working in Rural Areas
Courtney Kahle ................................................................. 90-103
The Retail Clinics’ Place in the Primary Care Shortage and the Need for Collaboration, Communication and Integration as a means of Preventing Fragmented Care
Kelly Gallo Strong ................................................................. 104-114

The Nurse Practitioner is in: Onsite Health Clinics and Their Benefits
Erica Cribbs ................................................................. 115-123

Why the Use of Telemedicine can Alleviate the Burden of Current Scope of Practice Norms for Nurse Practitioners and the Primary Care Shortage in the United States
Tyler Hanson ................................................................. 124-136

Acupuncture Licensing and the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act: An Opportunity for Greater Access to Alternative Medicine in America’s Changing Healthcare System
Katie Witham ................................................................. 137-149

Closing the Gap Between Military Medical Personnel and their Civilian Counterparts: A Possible Solution to the Expanding Nurse Shortage in the United States
Spencer Lickteig ................................................................. 150-167

Nurse Practitioners: Comparing Two States’ Policies
Colin Goodman ................................................................. 168-184

New Mexico: An Expansion of Scope of Practice Model
Andrea Reino ................................................................. 185-197

Maine: Setting the Example for the Role of Nurse Practitioners
Adrienne Saltz ................................................................. 198-212