The Study Program:

The course focuses on the many facets of leadership and implications for current leadership in healthcare. Students select a political, religious, or an arts leader and report the history, accomplishments, and lessons learned from this leader. The socio-political environment of each leaders' era, and the interplay among individual leader characteristics, environmental, religious, and cultural needs of the time period will be explored and compared to the current environment.

Students may examine leadership characteristics of Roman religious and secular leaders such as St. Ignatius, St. Francis, St. Benedict; secular icons of art and architecture such as Michelangelo, Bernini, Di Vinci, Caravaggio; musicians like Verdi and Vivaldi; or political leaders such as Marcus Aurelius, Hadrian, Cicero, Pope Urban, Cardinal Borghese; or current leaders.

Opportunities to explore the impact of the arts on individual/organizational healing, and to discuss each students' "call" to leadership is central to this program. Art, architecture, music, poetry, history, and the many glorious resources of Rome and its environs: museums, ruins, civil structures, churches, concert halls, sacred sites, and dining experiences provide the "practica" settings for this exploration.

Program Outcome:

The overall outcome of this program is to enable alumni, graduate students, nurses, other health professionals, and friends to gain multi-cultural and international experiences, engage in the arts and contemplate the work of civic, religious, and artistic leaders in the Eternal City.
