COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course will examine intersections between challenges to the political order and challenges to the gender order in Italy. Across a chronological trajectory course reading, lectures and class discussion will offer a comparative perspective on the transformation of a deeply traditional Mediterranean culture, the progressive independence and political activism of Italian women, the changing relationships between sexes, and the modification of gender roles. Students will consider the impact of modernization, fascism and war on gender before moving on to look at the social and political impact of women’s suffrage, feminism and the gay liberation movement. The course will conclude with a look at some of the current gender-related issues as debated in Italian politics.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
Skills:
- History as a discipline consists of analysis and expository writing. Consequently, the “writing intensive” aspect of this course is designed both to improve your general writing skills and to develop your ability to “do” history. Through engagement with controversial subjects and conflicting interpretations across primary sources and secondary texts, you will further develop your abilities to read and write critically and to recognize and question the political implications of history writing.

Knowledge:
- Students will gain a familiarity with the changing social/political roles of Italians over the last century
- Students will conduct a gendered analysis of some key moments of modern Italian history.
- Students will sharpen their understanding of the interactions between gender and politics and learn how views of gender can change in response to specific historical and political circumstances

REQUIRED READING:
· Sakai and reserve documents (primary and secondary sources)

Attendance Policy
In accordance with the JFRC mission to promote a higher level of academic rigor, all courses adhere to the following absence policy:

- For all classes meeting once a week, students cannot incur more than one unexcused absence.
- For all classes meeting twice a week, students cannot incur more than two unexcused absences.
- For all classes meeting three times a week, students cannot incur more than two unexcused absences.

This course meets once a week, thus a total of 1 unexcused absence(s) will be permitted. Unexcused absences beyond these will result in a lowering of your final grade.
COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

1. Class Participation and Forum posts- 10%

You are responsible for each week's readings and should come to class with specific questions and comments in mind. Students will be asked to volunteer to lead class discussion for each week, but our conversation will depend on the participation of all of the members of the class. By 7 pm Tuesday of each week, you must compose and post to the discussion board a reaction to the primary readings for the week. These should be approximately 200-300 words (about a page). I reserve the right to require formal written summaries of the readings should it become apparent that students are not keeping up with them. Lectures in this class deal with specific events, institutions and individuals and the historical debates surrounding them, the readings provide the context for these debates and the general narrative of Italian Women’s history.

2. Mid-Term Exam – 20%

The mid-term will include a variety of question types. These will be drawn from your texts, the Sakai readings and from the lectures.

3. Writing project – 50%

You are required to complete a research paper of approximately 10-12 pages in length. This assignment is to be completed in stages, each of which will account for a portion of your grade. Guidelines for this assignment and a breakdown of grading are provided at the end of the syllabus.

6. Final Exam – 20%

This will include a variety of question types and will focus on material covered since the mid-term.

Writing Project
Your research paper accounts for fully one half of your grade in this class. It is to be completed in the following stages:

Jan 26: Question/Proposal (5 points): The first stage of academic writing is the formulation of a question to direct your inquiry. In the first weeks of the semester, you should be thinking about what aspect of Modern Italy you wish to explore and checking to see what information is available to you. On the 26th you must turn in a working question and a proposed approach to the research. The proposal should address how you plan to approach the question. It must include what types of materials you plan to consult. This is a working proposal – which means that as you research your topic, both the question and the approach are likely to undergo modifications according to the requirements/peculiarities of the topic.

Feb 16: Annotated Bibliography (10 points): This is a bibliography of sources you are gathering for your paper. You may end up citing only some of them in your actual paper, but all works consulted (even those you decide not to use) belong in your bibliography. You must provide at least 6 annotations. An annotation is a brief summary of a work placed beneath its bibliographic information. For the purposes of a research paper, this summary should focus on those parts of the work that are relevant to the topic. Your bibliography may conform to any of the standard styles. (ie. Turabian, MLA, etc. – available in the library) but must be consistent throughout.

NOTE: WIKIPEDIA IS NOT AN ACCEPTABLE SOURCE FOR A RESEARCH PAPER

Mar 16: Sentence Outline with Thesis Statement (10 points): At this point you must transform your question into a thesis statement and organize your research into a full-sentence outline. See “Assignments” for guidelines on writing a sentence outline. Remember: the more detailed the outline, the more help I can give you with the direction of your paper. It is at this stage that you should be answering the following questions: What information have you found to support your thesis? What is still missing? Will you organize your paper chronologically or topically? What information will you include in each subsection? Note: an outline does not include the introduction and conclusion.

Mar 30: Rough Draft: There is no separate point value for your rough draft, but it is, of course, in your interest to turn one in. It is at this point that I can make suggestions to help you improve the content or structure of your argument if necessary. It is also an opportunity to have the paper proofread by “fresh” eyes (although you are encouraged to help one another with proofreading as well). As this is a writing intensive class, the grade for your research paper will derive from both content and writing style. In short: grammar, spelling, punctuation, syntax and vocabulary all count. After examining your draft, I will assign an “as is” grade which will later be replaced with your grade on the final version of your paper.

Apr 13: Final Paper (25 points): The final version of your paper should include a title page, citations and bibliography. It must be turned in on Wednesday, April 9th. Late papers will be penalized at a rate of .5 point (out of the 25 available) per day starting at the beginning of class on April 15.
