LUC PLSC 300 in Central Europe

This study abroad program will take you to the heart of Central Europe to explore the complexity and challenges of a democratic change through experiential learning. You will visit four countries on this trip: Hungary, Poland, the Czech Republic, and Austria. In each of these countries, academic guided excursions will be coupled with field exploration of sites important for our understanding of a democratic process and lectures from local experts. The study will engage local political and academic experts in our discussions about the political transition. Students will have plenty of opportunity to experience, explore, and discuss the process and forces of democratization in these four countries. Visit the program website to learn more about the incredible site visits included in this program.
