

2017 Hartigan Lecture

International Institutions in an Era of Nationalism

Jon Pevehouse
Vilas Distinguished Achievement Professor
Department of Political Science
University of Wisconsin-Madison

From the anti-WTO riots in Seattle and the election of Donald Trump, to anti-EU demonstrations in Greece to “Brexit,” global publics seem to be turning against international organizations and agreements. Is this rise in nationalist, anti-globalization sentiment new? What accounts for its seemingly sudden emergence? This lecture will explore the historical origins of these sentiments and discuss why they are neither new, nor as deeply held as is often thought.

Thursday, November 30 at 7:00 PM
Information Commons, 4th Floor

Reception to follow

Funded by the Hartigan family and sponsored by the Political Science Department