Biographical History

Fern Shaffer, born in 1944, was a Chicago-based artist, ritualist, educator, guest lecturer, and exhibitor who worked on a local, national, and international scale. Shaffer received her Bachelor of Arts from University of Illinois-Chicago in 1981, followed by several years of graduate studies at both UIC and the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. She obtained her Master of Arts in Interdisciplinary Arts from Columbia College in 1991. Shaffer was the president of Artemisia Gallery from 1984 to 1991. Shaffer has participated in many conferences, residencies, and given lectures throughout her professional career. She has also taught art to young students and private clients.

Aside from her solo work, which consists mainly of paintings, Shaffer has been a part of a collaborative duo with photographer Othello Anderson since the mid-1980s. The pair's work documents the performance of rituals, done by Shaffer in shamanic costume, at different locations where the artists believe Earth needs healing. Shaffer performed the rituals and Anderson photographed them. Most of Shaffer's other work also addressed environmental issues, the need for healing, and ritualistic performance. Shaffer and Anderson traveled to various locations world-wide to perform and document rituals and have exhibited their artwork in several countries. Their work has also been the subject of many authors writing about art and ritual in the 1980s and 1990s.
