

LUC WRITING CENTER – “CITATION STYLE LINKS”

Learning how to cite your papers in MLA, APA, Chicago, Scientific Style and Format, or Turabian style can help prevent plagiarism and provide you with the skills you need to successfully present research projects in the workplace and perhaps one day publish articles and books of your own. Consult the following websites and citation generators to create a flawless works cited page that will put the perfect finish to your paper and boost your grade!

1. Purdue Owl: Hosted by Purdue University, this official website contains tips on writing, research, samples of successful papers, and provides a helpful citation chart that can be downloaded onto your computer.
2. EasyBib: Run by Scholar Space, this useful website contains multiple citation guides to citing sources from journals and books, to newspapers and magazines.
3. BibMe: Based on the most current citation books for APA, MLA, and Chicago citation, BibMe helps you craft and generate citations.
4. Citation Machine: This citation machine generates citations in MLA, APA, Chicago, Turabian, and Harvard, but it is up to you to fill in some of the details (author, chapter title, etc.) before the citation is generated.
5. Scientific Style and Format: Based on the Council of Science Editors Manual for Authors, Editors, and Publishers, this website provides citation formats consistent with Scientific Style and Format (8th Edition). Scientists of the world, enjoy!
6. APA Style: For the psychologists and behavioral scientists out there, the American Psychological Association maintains this handy website, which provides exhaustive examples of how to cite correctly using APA (6th Edition).
7. MLA Style: For the arts and humanities, the Modern Language Association maintains and updates the MLA website and manual (8th Edition).
8. The University of Chicago Press: The University of Chicago Press regularly updates this website in accordance with the newest edition of Kate L. Turabian (8th Edition).
9. Chicago Style: The University of Chicago Press also updates this website with the newest edition of The Manual of Chicago Style (7th Edition).
10. Loyola Writing Center: Remember to consult the LUC Writing Center “Online Resources” page on Loyola University Chicago’s website. There you’ll find links to multiple citation and formatting guides.