SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

Inspiring minds

Nearly 500 years ago, the Jesuits began a tradition that focused on working with people through education, regardless of their race or religion. At the beginning of the 21st century, Loyola's School of Education continues this tradition, acknowledging our diverse, global society. Through fieldwork, internship, and research opportunities, you will actively learn about and contribute to the field of education. From your first semester, you'll engage in hands-on experience in a variety of classrooms. This focus on fieldwork will set you apart once you graduate—you'll have the confidence and the skills to be an effective teacher on your first day in the classroom.

1200+ HOURS OF FIELDWORK EXPERIENCE, EQUIVALENT TO ONE YEAR OF TEACHING EXPERIENCE.

100% OF OUR GRADUATES ARE EMPLOYED WITHIN A YEAR

MULTIPLE PROGRAMS

Loyola's School of Education offers a variety of teacher preparation programs to meet the varied career interests of education majors pursuing a BSEd.

Our field-based program takes you beyond the traditional classroom setting. Thanks to our outstanding partnerships, you'll enjoy the benefits of out-of-classroom learning at placements such as The Field Museum, The Chicago Children's Museum, Adler Planetarium, and Lincoln Park Zoo.

ACCREDITATION

The School of Education is accredited by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) now the Council for the Accreditation for Educator Preparation (CAEP) and the Illinois State Board of Education (ISBE). These accreditations ensure that you will be better prepared for licensing and advanced board licensure than students from non-accredited programs.
